M'ADOO BACKS GARNER TO WIN 1932 ELECTION

House Speaker Praised as Best Qualified Man for Post.

UNITED DEMOCRACY SEEN UNDER TEXAN

Proposed Candidate Called Free of Schisms and Party Squabbles.

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—William Gibbs McAdoo today announced a preference for John N. Garner, of Texas, for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The former Secretary of the Treasury, who was himself a candidate for the nomination in 1924, said that under the Speaker of the House all elements of the party should be able to unite, and in that case his election would be certain.

"I have received so many inquiries as to my attitude toward the forthcoming Democratic presidential nomination that I take this method of answering them," said a formal statement from Mr. McAdoo.

Garner's Abilities Praised.

"During the six years I was Secretary of the Treasury," he stated, "I had, of necessity, close official relations with the ways and means committee of the House, of which Mr. Garner was a leading member. I came, therefore, to know him intimately and to have the opportunity to judge, under the severe test of complicated problems, the quality of his mind and the measure of his ability.

"I was greatly impressed by his sound judgment, by his broad comprehension of political, social and economic problems; by his integrity—moral and intellectual—and by his high character and practical ideals. His elevation to the speakership was not a matter of chance, but a recognition of 22 years of able and distinguished service in the House of Representatives.

"Mr. Garner has unusual knowledge, acquired by hard work and experience, of the problems of government. He would bring to the Presidency just the equipment that is sorely needed to direct the affairs of the people of the United States in these extraordinary times.

Beyond Schisms' Reach.

"Moreover, Mr. Garner is not involved in any party schisms that threaten success on election day. He is beyond the reach of those sinister and subtle influences which work unceasingly against the interests of the masses of the people.

"He appeals to those elements in our national life which need a leader who understands their problems, whose sympathies are with them because he does understand them, and who, because of heredity and environment, is one of the people himself.

"He will know how to use the executive power to promote the common good and to suppress favoritism and extravagance and the flagrant forces of privilege and corruption which have brought the country to its present unfortunate condition.

"Under Mr. Garner all elements of the party should be able to unite. In that case his election would be certain."

Blagden Missing Again After Kidnaping Story

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Harry G. Blagden, wealthy sportsman, of Upper Saranac, N. Y., who came to the home of a Cleveland friend Tuesday with a story of having been kidnaped and held captive for four days, was missing again today. Blagden has disappeared from the residence of Claude J. Peck, his friend, and police were searching for him again tonight.

Detectives are investigating a twelve-cylinder car, found in a local garage, and believed to be the one in which Blagden came to Cleveland. It was left in the garage by a young man who gave the name of J. M. Johnson, said to be the son of an Eastern millionaire.

Ambassador From Spain And Wife Reach Coast

San Francisco, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Juan Francisco de Cardenas, new Spanish Ambassador to the United States, and his wife were visiting here today following their arrival on the Tatsuta Maru from Japan, where he was Spain's Ambassador.

Senor de Cardenas formerly was counsellor of the Spanish Embassy in Washington. The couple plan to go to the Capital after a trip to Los Angeles Saturday. Mme. de Cardenas is a Roumanian by birth. Her brother, Frederick Nano, is charge d'affaires of the Roumanian Embassy in Washington.

Cooperation Era Seen Near End in Congress

Politics Are Again Expected to Play Part as Recovery Program, Result of Nonpartisan Efforts, Reaches Final Stages.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The "era of cooperation" on Capitol Hill—so called because of the spirit in which the Democrats have supported President Hoover's rehabilitation program—is about over.

Henceforth the country can look for some old-fashioned politics, with Democrats denouncing Republicans and vice versa. In other words, the country can expect Congress to behave as a Congress normally behaves when there is a presidential election in the offing.

This does not mean that the Democrats are threatening to tear to pieces every recommendation that President Hoover sends to the Capitol in the future. Nor does it mean that the Republicans are threatening to wreck every piece of legislation conceived in the brain of a Democrat.

What it does mean is that the Democrats are becoming weary of the close harmony. For three months now, the Democrats have been working shoulder to shoulder with their rivals, seeking to hurry the "good times" legislative program through Congress. For this they have been widely and lavishly praised.

However, now that the program has almost completed its journey through Congress, the Democrats feel like—well, like being Democrats again. In about four months now the two big political parties will be holding their national conventions and selecting their nominees. And in a little over eight months the voters will be selecting one of those nominees.

The end of the so-called truce was virtually proclaimed in the course of an old-fashioned partisan debate in the House yesterday.

Representative Joe Byrns (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House appropriations committee, had just finished assailing President Hoover's plan for reorganizing the executive branch of the Government. He had intimated that Hoover sent his "hastily prepared" message to the Capitol after hearing rumors that the Democrats themselves had a plan for reorganization. He had charged Hoover with creating more commissions than any other President. He had accused Hoover of more than doubling the expenses of the Department of Commerce when he was its

PAINLEVE TO FORM CABINET IN FRANCE

Laval, Tardieu and Reynaud, at Odds Over Portfolio, Not to Be Members.

Paris, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Paul Painleve, former premier and leader of the Republican Socialist faction in the Chamber of Deputies, announced tonight that he would form a new cabinet to succeed the resigned government of Pierre Laval.

Almost immediately after Painleve announced his decision, he was confronted with serious and unexpected obstacles to formation of a new cabinet.

It was understood that Laval, Andre Tardieu, and Paul Reynaud, all members of the former cabinet, had decided not to participate in the new government because of a disagreement over who would assume the portfolio of minister of interior. Laval and Tardieu command powerful followings in the Chamber of Deputies and formation of a government without their aid would be almost impossible.

The disagreement arose at a conference at Painleve's home. It was first decided that Laval would be foreign minister, but the dispute over the ministry of interior caused Tardieu and Reynaud to withdraw from the conference. Later they discussed the deadlock with Laval.

Painleve always has been a warm friend of the United States. He was minister of war in 1917 when the United States entered the World War and was premier when the first American troops entered the main lines. He kept in close contact with Gen. John J. Pershing and President Wilson.

Michigan G. O. P. Gives Its Support to Hoover

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The Republican State Central committee today adopted a resolution favoring the renomination of President Hoover and recommending that the State convention instruct its 41 delegates to the national convention to support him.

The State convention will be in Grand Rapids, April 27.

De Valera's Lead In Ireland Grows

His Fianna Fail Party Is Far Ahead of Foes as Votes Are Counted.

Dublin, Irish Free State (Friday), Feb. 19. (A.P.).—Republican forces were in the lead and gaining more seats in the Dail Eireann early today as returns from the Irish Free State's election indicated a real possibility that Eamonn de Valera, stanch foe of England, would be the next president.

His Fianna Fail party had 46 seats and his Labor supporters had 7, giving him a lead of 11 over the government's 42, including 10 held by independents. Already the Labor party was preparing its conditions on which it would support De Valera. William Norton, chairman of the party, who was elected from Kildare, said that if the final result gave the Labor members a balance of power they would support the Fianna Fail solely on condition that it adopted the Labor plans for remedying unemployment.

FIREMAN IS KILLED, 2 INJURED IN CRASH

Maurice Corbett, 32, Dead in Street Car-Fire Truck Collision at Corner.

One fireman was killed, another was seriously injured and a street car motorman was also badly hurt when No. 4 Truck was struck by a Washington Railway & Electric Co. street car at Eleventh and P streets northwest, while speeding to a fire at Logan Circle at 10:58 last night. The fireman, his chest crushed and his right leg almost torn off, died in Emergency Hospital at 1:05 o'clock this morning.

After the crash the fire truck, 63 feet 9 inches long and weighing several tons, tore across the southwest corner at the intersection, sideswiped one tree, uprooted another and then crashed into two parked automobiles.

The crash victim was Private Maurice C. Corbett, 32 years old, of 1113 Seventh street northeast, who was standing on the running board of the truck. He was pinned momentarily by the street car, then torn from the running board and thrown to the pavement.

The tillerman of the fire apparatus, Edward C. Wolf, 34 years old, of 1250 E street northeast, was thrown from his high perch when the truck struck the first tree. He is believed to have suffered internal injuries, and was unable to lie down when he was taken to Emergency Hospital.

The motorman of the one-man street car, Clarence E. Jones, 38, of 514 First street southeast, is believed to have suffered a fractured skull. He is in a serious condition at Garfield Hospital.

Other firemen on the truck except the driver escaped injury by leaping.

The ironic note in the accident was the nature of the alarm the firemen were speeding to answer. No. 2 en-

Men Entering Store Wound Policeman

T. D. Bacon Shot in Leg; One Man Arrested at Seventh and E.

Policeman T. D. Bacon, of the First Precinct Station, was shot down early today as he fought with two men on E street northwest, between Sixth and Seventh streets. He is in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital.

A sawed-off shotgun was found in the automobile of the pair, which had been parked in front of 629 E street. Policeman Bacon saw the car at the curb and went to examine it. The two men, who had gone into 629 E street, came out and found Bacon and Charles W. Flannigan, a night watchman, looking into the car.

The men started battling with the policeman and Mr. Flannigan, and in the melee one of them was thrown through the plate-glass window of the Enterprise Shoe Repair Shop, at 623 E street. One of the men pulled a gun and shot Bacon. Flannigan and others manged to subdue one of the men, while the other escaped. At the First Precinct Station he attempted to grab a pistol in the holster of Patrolman John Burgess. He refused to give his name.

Nun Gives Life in Fire Seeking to Save Pupils

Hawthorne, N. Y., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—A 65-year-old nun, Sister Bernard, was burned to death in a fire which early today destroyed St. Hyacinth's School, a Catholic boarding school. She gave her life searching for students she believed were in the burning building.

SENATE BLOCKS HOUSE MOVE ON PAY INCREASES

Cuts Restriction Clause From Agriculture Supply Bill.

PRECEDENT IS SEEN FOR SIMILAR ACTS

Department Objects to Alternative Plans Before Committee.

Restriction of Federal pay increases and filling of vacancies without presidential review, made part of every appropriation bill by a special House rule, yesterday was eliminated from the Agriculture supply bill by the Senate appropriations committee.

As in the House, the Agriculture supply bill is the first appropriation measure reported. Thus action of the Senate committee in dropping "Sections 2 and 3" sets a Senate precedent for every other appropriation measure.

Two alternative proposals were before the committee, which failed to reach an agreement on any one of the three. The restrictive sections were dropped "without prejudice," and a loophole left for reviewing the whole matter in conference with the House.

Alternative Proposals.

Alternative plans before the committee were:

1. That Congress deduct from a department's budget money that would be saved by the restrictive sections, and allow the department to administer the remaining funds to the best advantage. This proposal was sponsored by Secretary Hyde.

2. Incorporation of a fourth section in the bill providing that the restrictive provisions not apply to temporary, emergency, seasonal or cooperative positions. This section was proposed by Director J. Clawson Roop, director of the Bureau of the Budget.

Representatives of the Agriculture Department told the committee they "would rather have Congress allow us a minimum amount and let us do the best we can with it rather than have this kind of a millstone hanging around our necks."

McNary Sees Dangers.

Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), Oregon, chairman of the subcommittee, expressed sympathy with these objections.

"Do not put people in a harness," he told the committee. "I think you should give good men wide discretion, and trust to their judgment; and if you have too much money, cut it down rather than put them in a straitjacket. It simply results in extravagance and misappropriation of money and maladministration."

Neither Secretary Hyde nor Director Roop objected to the principle applied by the House, though both took

Miners Get Quick Aid In March on City Hall

Hartshorne, Okla., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Five hundred unemployed coal miners marched on the city hall late today demanding relief and threatening to raid food stores. They won. Merchants quickly subscribed $2,200 for distribution among destitute families. There was no disorder.

The miners listened quietly while A. A. Snider, their spokesman, described their plight and while Mayor Joe A. Brown and John P. Savage, county commissioner, promised every effort to obtain permanent relief.

Washington Essay Contest Indorsed by Mrs. Mussey

Post's $1,000 Cash Prize Competition Declared Splendid Opportunity for Students; Many Requests for Booklets Received and Theses Submitted.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, the octogenarian lawyer, educator, foremost in women's movements and former vice president of the Board of Education, added her commendation yesterday to those who have indorsed The Post George Washington Essay Contest in which $1,000 in cash prizes is to be distributed among the students of public, private and parochial schools in the District of Columbia, nearby Virginia and Maryland.

"The Post Washington Essay Contest should win the hearty cooperation of every parent or guardian of boys and girls within the age limits set for the contest," Mrs. Mussey pointed out yesterday. "It is an unequaled opportunity for the school children of Washington and vicinity. From the point of one who has taken a life-long interest in education and once served as vice president of the Board of Education here the idea has a real appeal because I know that the young people participating in the contest will benefit largely from it, whether or not they win the prizes offered for the best essays.

"Another feature of the contest is that it brings before the contestants the human side of Washington. Unfortunately, a stilted view of him has been presented in the schools, one not so attractive to the youthful mind as the George Washington they discover for themselves through an intensive study of his career.

"The lofty spirit of Washington," concluded Mrs. Mussey, "his unselfish devotion to his country and his genius in using power for the good

CHINESE REJECT ULTIMATUM OF JAPAN FOR WITHDRAWAL; DROP SHELLS AT CONSULATE

U. S. Will Delay Further Moves Until Situation Becomes Clarified.

SOME SMALL HOPE IS HELD FOR ACCORD

America Is Believed Likely Not to Recognize New Manchurian Rule.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The United States will hold in abeyance further moves toward conciliation of the Japanese and Chinese demands at Shanghai until the political and military situation there has clarified, it became known here yesterday. Secretary Stimson has prepared the machinery for effecting peace between the warring powers, and at the first feasible opportunity the wheels will be put in motion. Five or six courses of action have been drawn up which range from American unilateral action as was followed by Secretary Stimson in his manifesto of January 7 to a concerted move by the United States and Great Britain in the cause of peace.

The Japanese ultimatum, which was regarded in high military circles here as a practically unacceptable summons was, revealed here late last night coincident with the report from Chinese sources that it would be rejected.

Peace Efforts Redoubled.

The situation in the International Settlement is still the subject of constant anxiety to Secretary Stimson and as the threats of the great Japanese offensive have grown more definite and specific, the diplomatic efforts for the protection of American property and life in the area have been redoubled.

Some small hope is held out for a change in the Japanese military policy following the result of the Japanese elections which will be held tomorrow. At the present time the political party in force has emphasized the Chinese campaign as its chief appeal to the voters. The opposition, consisting in the moderate Minseito group, where such figures as former Premier Wakatsuki and Baron Shidehara are in command, will try to turn the tables on the government and assume political control of the country once more.

Considerable Apprehension.

The Japanese internal political situation is causing considerable apprehension in all countries on account of the anomalous position of the military in Japanese political life. In the event that a turnover in the political composition of the country might result in a corresponding change in the military direction of the Chinese campaign, some military coup d'etat by the enormously potent military group has been bruited.

The vagaries of the Japanese

Home Town of Murray Hails Him as 'President'

Collinsville, Tex., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—This town, where Gov. William Henry Murray of Oklahoma was born, hailed him at a homecoming celebration today as "the next President of the United States."

His address explaining his political credo left the impression it was the platform on which he would seek the Democratic presidential nomination. Friends close to the Oklahoma executive predicted that he would formally announce his candidacy next Sunday, after the Oklahoma State convention on Saturday.

Text of Ultimatum Handed To Chinese Chief by Japan

(Associated Press.)

Japan's ultimatum delivered to the Chinese commander at Shanghai yesterday follows in a translation received from Chinese sources:

"Section 1. The Chinese to evacuate completely from the first line by 7 a. m. on the morning of the 20th and to evacuate completely from the designated area by 5 p. m. The same day—all forces and other military establishments to be removed and no new establishments to be put up.

"Section 2. During the evacuation the Japanese will neither fire upon nor pursue the Chinese forces except that they will use airplanes to observe progress of the observation and after the evacuation the Japanese forces will retain only the district of the extra settlement roads, including Hongkew Park.

"Section 3. They will send out officers to ascertain the sector of complete evacuation after the first line is evacuated.

"Section 4. The Chinese forces are to undertake the protection of Japanese nationals outside the area evacuated. They reserve the right to take appropriate measures in case of failure effectively to suppress the plain clothes men.

"Section 5. The protection of foreign nationals in the Shanghai neighborhood including the evacuated area is to be discussed separately.

"Section 6. Effective carrying out of the promise to suppress all anti-Japanese movements. This will be the subject of negotiations by the Japanese diplomatic officials.

"If the foregoing articles are not carried out the Japanese forces will be compelled to take necessary action, all consequences to rest with the Chinese army."

3 Bluejackets Are Killed; Tokyo Onslaught Is Due Tomorrow.

DEMAND FOR FLIGHT CALLED INTOLERABLE

Residents of Neutral Zone Are More Nervous Now Than Ever Before.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Shanghai (Friday), Feb. 19.—Chinese guns replied today to Japan's ultimatum demanding Chinese evacuation of Shanghai with a bombardment of Chapei battle front in which, Japanese headquarters said, three Japanese bluejackets were killed.

The bombardment was interpreted by Japanese army officers as a gesture of defiance. The defenders' guns dropped shells around the Japanese consulate and the Flagship Idzumo in the Whangpoo River during the night to show, apparently, that the Chinese were holding fast.

China furthermore piled up her troops, guns and ammunition, kept up a desultory firing on Japanese lines and otherwise gave no indication of accepting the demand that her forces leave Shanghai before sundown Saturday, or face all the power at Japan's command.

Japanese Onslaught Nears.

The Japanese onslaught seemed almost certain to begin some time after 5 p. m. tomorrow.

China's Nineteenth Route Army dug deeper into its positions about Shanghai and away toward Woosung, massing reserve troops, strengthening defenses and rolling up ordnance of all available kinds.

It was estimated that 14,000 Japanese soldiers occupied a long line stretching from the northern borders of the International Settlement to Woosung, six of China's forts [illegible] miles away. Others were held in reserve.

"The Chinese apparently intend to remain where they are," a Japanese officer at headquarters said.

Express Condemnation.

Shanghai's foreign missionary community, which numbers several thousand persons, almost without exception, expressed condemnation of the Japanese ultimatum. They said it apparently was intended to start new fighting, "which the Japanese seem to desire."

Some missionaries said they felt the terms of the ultimatum were so sweeping that it was impossible for the Chinese to meet them, such, for instance, as stopping the anti-Japanese boycott almost overnight and even withdrawing thousands of soldiers within a comparatively few hours.

Japanese official circles, both consular and military, said they had received no Chinese reply to the ultimatum up to 11 a. m. today and "did not expect any."

"The Chinese apparently have no desire to settle the conflict in a peaceful manner," Japanese army headquarters said.

Is Termed Intolerable.

The Chinese government, temporarily located at Honanfu, received the demands and indicated it had no intention of acceding to them. Officials described the communication as "intolerable and absolutely inacceptable" and Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the defense forces, said "I am ready to fight if the government orders me to."

The ultimatum followed a breakdown in renewed peace negotiations participated in by American Minister Nelson T. Johnson and the British

VINSON SHOWS NEED OF NAVY UPBUILDING

Tells House Japanese Will Have Equal Fleet in 1936 if U. S. Lags.

(Associated Press.)

A sketch of what might happen to the United States if it had difficulties with Japan was drawn for the House yesterday by one of the leading proponents of an American Navy as big as treaties permit.

Chairman Vinson, of the naval committee, continuing a campaign to obtain enactment of his bill to authorize the expenditure of $616,250,000 for building up the fleet, drew the picture. He said that "in the Far East the situation has become more and more alarming," but that "no member of this House more devoutly wishes for the preservation of peace than I do."

Unless something is done in this country to build up the American Navy, he asserted, the United States and Japan will be on an equal footing by 1936. In such an event, the Georgia Democrat continued, "we would have little chance of protecting "the unfortified Guam and Philippine Islands which lie at the doorstep" of Japan.

Size Is No Protection.

"Great and populous as is our country, we must realize that size and population are in themselves no protection," Mr. Vinson said. "China, with an area greater than our country and with a population three times as numerous, has been unable to keep Japan from extending her control over Manchuria and over Shanghai; but, unlike China, we have, in addition to our great continental territory, island possessions which lie thousands of miles from the North American Continent, and the Panama Canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific.

"An interruption of our sea-borne trade would bring about, in a comparatively short time, an economic

Saxony's Last King Dies From Paralysis Effects

Sybillenort, Germany, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Frederick August III, the last king of Saxony, died tonight after suffering a stroke of paralysis.

Frederick August succeeded to the throne in 1904, upon the death of his father, King George. He was faced with many acute internal problems, including the parliamentary demands for reform of the upper house to break the predominance of Agrarian leaders and permit commerce and industry a greater influence. In 1918 a revolution broke out and on November 10 a Republic was proclaimed. Frederick August abdicated on November 13.

1 Killed and Many Hurt When Reds Battle Nazis

Berlin, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—One man was killed, another was dying and a score were seriously injured today in clashes at various places between Communists and National Socialists.

Near Kottsus Communists stoned a Nazi parade and in the fight which followed one man was killed and another probably fatally hurt. At Weihreim 20 were seriously injured in another fight, and at Leipsic an unemployment demonstration ended in a riot during which one Nazi was badly hurt and another beaten into unconsciousness. There were 100 arrests.

MANCHURIA IS MADE INTO NEW REPUBLIC

Latest Protectorate of Japan Proclaims Independence From Chinese Rule.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Mukden, Manchuria, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The new republic of Ankuo, born of military conquest, proclaimed its independence from China today and unfurled its five-barred-rising sun banner over Manchuria and inner Mongolia.

The executive committee of northeastern Manchuria, composed of Chinese leaders raised to high places by the army of occupation, declared an area half again as large as the Japanese empire and holding 30,000,000 people to be what is generally regarded as a protectorate of Japan.

In flowery, classical language calling their country the land of milk and honey, the proclamation asserted: "We have decided to sever relations with the Chinese government and to proclaim complete independence.

"The people have suffered long enough under the maladministration of military overlords. That militant clique must be banished forever. The desire of the people for peace is like a starving man's hunger.

"We oppose antiforeignism. We want friendship and peace with all nations. We are determined to maintain the policy of the open door with equal opportunity for the commerce of all peoples, thereby promoting mutual prosperity."

Nominally the state is independent of Japan as well as China, but actually it is virtually dependent on the Japanese government, for it could not last a day without the protection of Gen. Shigeru Honjo's army, which obliterated Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang's authority last fall.

The boundaries of Ankuo are clearly defined only on the north, the south and the east. Westward it extends vaguely into the Mongolian plains, from where a few princes came to participate in the convention. This was believed to be intentional so that its frontiers could eventually touch those of outer Mongolia, a Communist republic closely allied with Moscow.

News of additional adherents to the new regime was received tonight. Gen.

Hoover Indorsed By G. O. P. in Ohio

Col. Thompson Withdraws as Senate Aspirant; Brown on Visit.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The Republican State advisory committee today indorsed President Hoover for renomination and laid plans to perfect the party organization in Ohio. Among other Republican developments today was announcement by Col. Carmi A. Thompson, of Cleveland, former treasurer of the United States, that he was withdrawing his candidacy for nomination as United States senator for business reasons.

At the same time Mrs. Wilma Sinclair Levan announced she would not be a candidate for reelection as national committeewoman from Ohio.

Postmaster General Walter F. Brown made a flying trip here to confer with district leaders concerning selection of candidates for delegates to the national convention and announced he would return next week to finish the task.

HOUSE ARGUES ON GLORY FOR REORGANIZING

Prospects for Action on Bureau Merging Seen as Brighter.

HOOVER IS CRITICIZED BY SEVERAL LEADERS

His Method of Presenting Plea Hit by Garner and Others.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Prospects for action toward effective reorganization of the Government departments brightened yesterday when the House fell into a spirited debate, both on the floor and off, over who should get the glory for whatever may be done.

At the end of the feverish day there still was no word from the Democratic leaders on either side of the Capitol that anything in particular would be attempted. Yet the course of the oratorical cross-fire—which centered largely on the question where the plan originated, and when—gave promise that if the subsidiary question of political glory can be settled by some sort of gentlemen's agreement, reorganization itself might then be considered.

"I thought he was going to be helpful and recommend some curtailment," said Speaker Garner in commenting on President Hoover's special message, "but instead he asked for new offices that will create expense instead of promoting economy."

Garner Favors Merging.

Speaker Garner has been on record in favor of consolidation for several days. He appears still to feel, however, that no sudden action should be taken.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, the majority leader, expressed the view that the President's suggestions were nebulous.

"The President, as usual," he said, "made no specific recommendations, except for additional offices, and to give him more power."

Representative Byrnes, of Tennessee, chairman of the appropriations committee, charged on the floor that Mr. Hoover was the most extravagant Chief Executive ever to hold office in the United States in peace times.

Earlier in the day the committee on expenditures in the executive departments again took up Representative Byrnes' bill to consolidate the Army and Navy into a single administrative branch, a proposal which never had been suggested by the White House.

Further Opposition to Bill.

"The President of the United States asks us to do something, yet his official family is opposed to this bill," said Chairman Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, during discussions of the Army-Navy consolidation measure.

Further arguments against this bill were presented to the committee yesterday in a letter from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army.

"No other measure proposed in recent years seems to me to be fraught with such potential possibilities of disaster for the United States," Gen. MacArthur wrote.

In taking up the pretense that the consolidation would bring about economies aggregating approximately $100,000,000 a year, Gen. MacArthur said, "I challenge any one to show a single major line of operation along which important economies could be effected without dangerously impairing efficiency."

Cites World Experience.

"I know of no responsible soldier or sailor in all history who has advocated such a plan as is now proposed," the letter said at another point.

"The nations of the world have not all been wrong for all time. * * * This bill would run counter to the experience of the world. I can not emphasize too strongly the inadvisability of serious consideration of this change in the face of the international situation that now exists. * * * Pass this bill and every potential enemy of the United States will rejoice."

Elaborating on the history of the reorganization endeavors as carried in the special messages of Wednesday, the White House yesterday made public a compilation of all of Mr. Hoover's speeches and recommendations on the subject since 1920.

This record which makes up some 30,000 words, began with an address before the American Institute of Mining Engineers, at Minneapolis, on August 26, 1920. On that occasion, before he was in the Cabinet, Mr. Hoover advocated specifically a pooling of all public works activities.

First Presentation.

After entering the Cabinet of President Harding as Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover first presented the subject at a dinner of the American Engineers Council, at Philadelphia, on April 16, 1921.

"The inadequacy, the wastefulness and the inefficiency of our Federal organization was evident enough under prewar conditions," Mr. Hoover said on that occasion. "These inadequacies, these inefficiencies, these wastes were exhibited to the country during the war at the cost of millions. * * * The hodge-podge of aims in certain administrative branches is scarcely believable when we consider our national pride and skill in organization."

Other recommendations on Federal reorganization were made by Mr. Hoover on April 7, 1924; on January 22, 1924; May 21, 1925; August 11, 1928; June 6, 1929; December 3, 1929; July 8, 1930; July 21, 1930; December 8, 1931, and December 29, 1931.

The record was made public at the White House without comment.

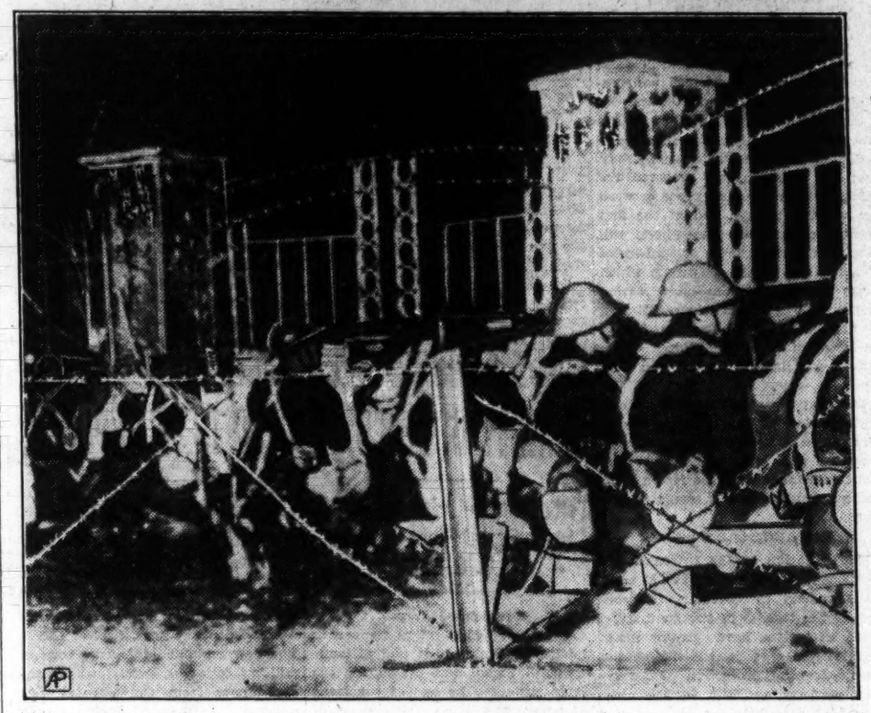
Slemp Predicts Hoover Indorsement in Virginia

(Associated Press.)

C. Bascom Slemp, Republican national committeeman from Virginia, said yesterday the Republican committee in the Old Dominion would meet next week and indorse President Hoover.

"We have taken steps to supply new credit for business," Slemp said. "The next step is to start business moving more rapidly through eliminating some of the wasteful competition and cutthroat prices that are now a restraining influence."

WAR PHOTOGRAPHS FROM EMBATTLED SHANGHAI



Top—Chinese snipers captured by Japanese soldiers after they blasted their way into Shanghai Chapel district were not treated very gently, as this picture shows. This fellow has just been dragged from his strategic post by two stocky Japanese bluejackets. Below—Japanese forces moved "efficient" and swiftly into action in Shanghai's Chapel section. Warships in the Whangpoo River first shelled the native sections of the city and then bluejackets were sent in to take them over. This Associated Press picture shows Japanese soldiers holding a position in the embattled area. It was rushed by boat and telephoto to The Washington Post.

and French Ministers and was itself followed by the resumption of an artillery engagement in the Chapei sector.

The Japanese informally presented the terms which they later embodied in the formal note and the Chinese rejected them even at that point. The defending army could be withdrawn only if the invaders retired simultaneously, it was said, and as for the other stipulations they were entirely outside the jurisdiction of the military.

American Minister Johnson, accompanied by the Japanese vice consul and others, climbed through a window to inspect the property of the American Methodist Episcopal Church South in Hongkew, which has been invaded three times by Japanese raiding parties ostensibly in search for snipers or inflammatory literature.

Since the last raid the mission school has been under the seal of Japanese naval authorities. One of the officials, the Rev. J. C. Hawk, visited the property before Mr. Johnson and found on the gate a notice reading, "Closed by order of the Imperial Japanese naval authorities."

Mr. Hawk then called on American Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham and asked him to accompany him to the compound, where they removed the Japanese seal. Mr. Cunningham persuaded the American minister to investigate and he did so, looking over broken windows, doors and furniture and scattered records, books and pictures.

Residents of the International Settlement were more nervous than they have been at any time since the outbreak of hostilities three weeks ago, fearing that if the Chinese do not accept the ultimatum and the Japanese go through with their threat there might ensue a clash with the foreign defense corps or serious damage to civilian life and property.

Technology Graduates To Hear Col. Locke

Col. Frank Locke, personnel director of the Division of Industrial Cooperation and Research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will address the members of the Washington Society of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at a luncheon to be given at the University Club at 12:45 o'clock today.

The bureau of which Col. Locke is the head is engaged in locating Technical positions for graduates of the M. I. T., and it is expected that a discussion of technological unemployment will follow the formal program.

COOPERATION ERA IS SEEN NEARING END IN CONGRESS

chief. He had even accused him of comparative extravagance in maintaining the White House.

Having listened to Byrns, Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, arose to defend President Hoover and his party.

Reply to Democrats.

"I read in the newspapers a short time ago," he said, "a statement from the Democratic leaders to the effect that the era of cooperation with the administration was over and that the country might now look for an era of politics.

"Judging from the goings on here on Capitol Hill in the last few days and from the speech of the gentleman from Tennessee I conclude that this statement is correct."

Nobody challenged Mapes' conclusion that the political armistice was over. Whereupon the Michigan Republican went ahead to defend President Hoover. The President and the Republican party, he said, had been trying for years to effect a consolidation of Government bureaus and thus save money. But always, he said, the Democrats have frustrated such efforts.

Garner Raps Hoover Plan.

Speaker John N. Garner was anothers who contributed to the post-armistice atmosphere at the Capitol. Commenting on the Hoover reorganization message, he said:

"Hell's bells, he wants to create new offices. We thought he wanted to abolish some."

Later in the day, Representative Ralph F. Lozier (Democrat), of Missouri, got off what sounded like a stump speech.

"Eleven years of Republican administration," he told the House, "have produced only a harvest of barren regrets, like Dead Sea fruit that tempt the eye but turn to ashes on the lip."

He predicted that the Democrats would be restored to power in 1932, "with a commission from the people to remedy existing abuses, restore popular government and inaugurate an era of efficiency and economy in the administration of national affairs."

Claim on Credit Program.

At the other end of the Capitol, Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, was claiming that the bill now before the Senate—the bill to liberalize the credit rules of the Federal Reserve system—is not a Hoover measure, but one of Democratic origin.

Senator Robinson has been becoming more and more irritated by the speeches of Republican orators. Not so long ago, he denounced these orators for "glorifying" Hoover and ignoring the part the Democrats have been playing in this Congress.

The other day he was again aroused when Lincoln day orators throughout the land decried the attacks that were being made on the President. Replying to these, Robinson pointed out that most of the attacks on President Hoover have been delivered by Republicans.

Robinson's Charges.

In his statement yesterday, Senator Robinson said:

"An editorial in The Washington Post of February 15 characterized the Glass-Steagall bill as one of the measures in the President's program. This is typical of the comments by Republican newspapers and spokesmen. Any one reading such statements without knowledge of the history of the proposed legislation would conclude naturally that the President first suggested the measure.

"Democrats in both Houses of Congress have cooperated with the President and his party associates in the preparation and passage of so-called emergency measures. But when enactments representing the best thought and the untiring efforts of members of both parties are claimed by Republican leaders as the achievement of President Hoover alone, the Democrats in the Congress are not only justified, they are almost required to call attention to the record of the two parties touching the particular subject matter of legislation being dealt with.

Cites Democratic Efforts.

"The Glass-Steagall bill is not an administration measure in the true sense. It was not suggested by the administration, and its principles were actually opposed by the governor of the Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury until quite recently."

The minority leader then went on to say that as far back as December 12, 1930, Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, had urged the Federal Reserve Board to broaden the range of paper eligible for rediscount, but was discouraged by the board. Subsequently, Robinson said, Sabath tried again, but in vain.

For 32 years, Robinson said, Democrats have been advocating something in the form of an emergency circulating fund to take care of a credit crisis such as exixsts today.

Bay State Is for Smith, Gov. Ely, Here, Is Sure

(Associated Press.)

Gov. Joseph R. Ely, of Massachusette, conferred here yesterday with members of the State's congressional delegation and predicted Massachusetts Democrats would be for Alfred E. Smith "without any doubt."

The governor smiled at comment that the move for Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, was gaining headway in Massachusetts and said "I don't think there is any question about it. Massachusetts is overwhelmingly for Mr. Smith."

Illness Keeps Snowden at Home.

London, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Philip Snowden, Viscount Ickornsham, who was reported yesterday to be suffering from a chill, was described this evening as "not so well" and may be confined to his home for several days. He is 68.

U.S. FRAMED LEAGUE NOTE, JAPAN CLAIMS

Nation Resents American "Influence" on First Draft of Protest.

Tokyo, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—American influence in framing the first draft of the League of Nations' latest note of protest regarding Shanghai was charged by Japanese foreign office circles today.

"There are strong indications that America had a finger in this pie," a spokesman said, basing his belief on what he called official information.

The first draft was much milder in tone, he admitted, than the note finally sent to Tokyo and appealing to Japan's "supreme sense of honor" to terminate hostilities at Shanghai out of respect for Article X of the league covenant.

This action of the twelve neutral members of the council was described as irregular, illegal and "enterily inadmissable."

Japan's Objections.

"Few members of the council now are empowered to act in its name," the spokesman continued. "These twelve councilors are not diplomats accredited to Tokyo, hence they have no right to address the Japanese government in the names of their respective states. We intend to stress these legal objections in our reply.

"The document has created a most unpleasant impression here and it is unacceptable because it is addressed to Japan alone. Those who sent it assume thereby that Japan is the aggressor, whereas the fact is that China is the aggressor.

"Such a one-sided appeal is unprecedented in league history. It prejudices Japan and intimates that the Chinese are in the right. We are unable to accept any such intimation."

Not to Recognize Ankuo.

Japan will not recognize the new republican state of "Ankuo," embracing Manchuria and parts of Mongolia, the foreign office said, until it was proved it has "all the attributes of an independent nation."

"We are in no hurry," a spokesman said, "and we are not going to build any canal," referring to the American recognition of the Republic of Panama in 1903, previous to the building of the Panama Canal.

He reiterated Japanese protestations that the new government is being set up by the Chinese people without interference from Japan, and added postponement of reconstruction "does not mean we won't deal with this state. We must deal with it."

Commenting on the breakdown of peace negotiations in Shanghai and the issuance of the Japanese ultimatum, officials said former President Chiang Kai-Shek was attempting to localize the conflict and would be greatly relieved if the defending Nineteenth Route Army were "disposed of."

British Warning Is Sent to China

It Includes Demand That Japan Also Protect English Interests.

London, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The British government has warned China that she or Japan will be held strictly accountable for any further loss in life by British nationals living in the Shanghai area, it was learned today.

Sir Miles Lampson, Minister to China, was instructed to request that the Chinese military avoid such incidents as the killing of two British sailors by shellfire yesterday. No further action in that connection is contemplated, but it is assumed the families of the two men will be paid indemnities.

Lord Ponsonby, labor leader in the House of Lords, accused the government of a "very serious error in judgment" by not supporting the United States in her note to Japan invoking the nine-power Pacific treaty and the Kellogg-Briand peace pact. "The United States has shown every desire to cooperate with the other powers and the League of Nations," he said, "and every effort should have been made to cooperate with the United States as closely as possible."

Guard Captain Dies In Virginia Auto Crash

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 18.—Capt Marshall Grout, of the 101st Cavalry, New York National Guard, Brooklyn, N. Y., was instantly killed tonight when his automobile turned over between Marshall and Rectortown, Va. Howard E. Smith, of near Warrenton, who was with him, suffered a broken collar bone and a fractured jaw, and was brought to the Fauquier County Hospital here.

Mr. Smith is treasurer of the Warrenton Horse Show. His wife is the former Miss Caroline Parkinson, of Warrenton.

THE PRESIDENT'S CALLERS

Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, called to discuss the progress of the national campaign against hoarding.

Representative Mapes, of Michigan, discussed the President's proposal for reorganization of the executive departments.

Former Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, called to report on the progress of the St. Lawrence waterway negotiations with Canada. Mr. Allen soon will take up his new post as assistant to President Dawes of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Senator George, of Georgia, called to present a delegation representing the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers.

C. Bascom Slemp urged the President to indorse some liberalization of the antitrust laws.

James G Harbord, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America; George Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, and Secretary of the Treasury Mills discussed the progress of the campaign against hoarding.

Representative Taber, of New York, spent fifteen minutes with the President, but declined to reveal his mission.

Col. J. Clawson Roop, the director of the budget, discussed routine matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad G. Moller, of New Canaan, Vt., called to pay their respects.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann called on Secretary Newton to report her observations during a recent speaking tour throughout the Middle West.

LEGUIA GOT $100,000 MORE, SENATE TOLD

Finance Committee Bares Credits to Peruvian by New York Banks.

(Associated Press.)

Additional credits of nearly $100,000 to Juan Leguia, son of the former president of Peru, from the National City Bank, the Chase National Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada were revealed yesterday by the Senate finance committee.

In connection with its recent investigation of foreign loans, the committee made public Leguia's checking account with the J. & W. Seligman & Co., of New York, through which, it was previously shown, he was paid $415,000 to negotiate $100,000,000 in loans to Peru.

The account showed credits to Leguia of $60,956 from the National City Bank, $10,000 from the Chase National Bank, $4,000 from the Equitable Trust Co., an affiliate of Chase, and $22,700 from the Royal Bank of Canada.

No explanation of the credits was made by Seligman & Co. in submitting the account to the committee. Before the close of the investigation officials of the Chase Bank were asked to explain the $10,000 given Leguia by their institution.

The account showed that Leguia frequently was overdrawn in his account with the Seligman company. The company reported to the committee he was only allowed to overdraw when he submitted adequate security. At one time, the account showed, he was overdrawn to the extent of $187,848.

The committee also made public exhibits furnished by the Seligman Co. showing it paid commissions, such as those paid to Leguia, in a number of other foreign bond negotiations.

A commission of $3,000 was paid to Antonio Borda, a citizen of Colombia, in connection with a $3,000,000 loan to the Mortgage Bank of Bogota in 1928.

P. J. Eder, a New York lawyer, was paid $42,000 in commissions for arranging bond issues totaling $4,000,000 to the department of Cauca Valley, Colombia.

The company paid $33,981.64 to Borda for arranging a $12,000,000 loan to the department of Cundinamarca, Columbia, in 1928.

F. J. Alvarado, of Costa Rica was paid $38,677.46 on a $8,000,000 loan to that republic.

George A. Helfert, an American doing business in Peru, was paid $7,500 as commission on a $1,500,000 loan to the province of Callao, Peru.

Marc Wilenkin, of London, was paid $60,000 for arranging a $12,000,000 loan to the Mortgage Bank of Jugoslavia. Wilenkin shared this with Nicholas Kagan, who was not identified.

MANCHURIA IS MADE INTO NEW REPUBLIC

Ting Chao, commander of the Chinese Eastern Railway guards and recent defender of Harbin against the Japanese, offered to cooperate with the government and his offer was accepted.

Likewise, that picturesque bandit chieftain "Old North Wind," whose men have lived off the country for years, offered to surrender and it was expected his followers would shortly be disarmed. Thus it was hoped to restore peace to all territory east of the Liao River.

The principal figures in the new line-up were Gen. Mah Chan-Shan, once defender of Tsitsihar and now governor of Heilungkiang; Tsang Shih-Yi, governor of Fengtien; Hsi-Hsia, governor of Kirin; Chang Ching-Hui, governor of the Harbin district; Tang Yu-Lin, governor of Jehol, and Lin-Shen and Chan-Wang, Mongolian princes.

Henry Pu-Yi, the former Manchu Emperor Hsuan-Tung, who was spirited out of Tientsin at the beginning of the Sino-Japanese trouble, is generally looked on as the leading candidate for lifetime dictator of his native land.

It was understood that the government would establish a Central Bank of Manchuria at Mukden which would absorb the official banks established in all the provinces by Marshal Chang. It would issue a uniform currency based on a silver bullion reserve of $10,000,000 Mexican (about $2,500,000 gold) and would redeem outstanding paper currency at the depreciated market price.

A silver standard was planned as a temporary expedient, leading eventually to adoption of a uniform gold standard.

New Judd Trial Asked.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—A petition for a new trial for Winnie Ruth Judd, condemned by a jury on February 8 to die for the murder of Agnes Anne Leroi, was filed today. Herman Lewkowitz, Mrs. Judd's counsel, said the motion was based on "general grounds."

PEACE TREATY HALTS COSTA RICAN REVOLT

Rebels Understood to Have Been Promised Safety if They Quit Country.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Costa Rica's three-day rebellion, led by a defeated presidential candidate, was ended today by a peace parley.

(The rebels, headed by Manuel Castro Quesada, the unsuccessful candidate, were assured of safety, providing they surrendered and left the country, dispatches from Panama City indicated.)

The peace was arranged in the American Legation, across the street from the rebel stronghold, the Bella Vista Barracks. The whole civilian population of the capital had fled their homes under the menace of intermittent firing from the barracks and a threat of the government that the rebel position would be bombarded.

Delegates representing the government and the discontented faction met in the legation in the presence of the entire diplomatic corps to this tiny Central American republic.

"I am greatly satisfied at the way Costa Rica has solved its own difficulties," said Charles C. Eberhardt, United States Minister, who had offered his good offices.

The government later said order had been restored. Eight dead and twenty wounded—all rebels—were the total casualties yesterday, the government reported. Four persons, including two loyalists, previously had been reported killed and many wounded in street shooting.

The loyalist army supported President Ricardo Jiminez. The Bella Vista Barracks were taken over by the Quesada forces Monday, after the returns from Sunday's election went against them.

Bubonic Plague Claims Life on Hawaii Island

Honolulu, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Bubonic plague caused the death of a laborer on the Hamakua Coast of Hawaii Island, Dr. F. E. Trotter, president of the board of health, announced today on his return from that section. He said the death of Domingo Agparos was the first due to plague in Hamakua since August, 1929.

Bubonic plague has existed for years on the northeastern coast of the Island of Hawaii, but has been held in check, except for infrequent outbreaks. Thousands of dollars have been spent in attempting to eradicat the disease.

Dry Repeal Demanded By Hotel Operators

Chicago, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Repeal of the eighteenth amendment to permit State control of the liquor traffic was demanded in a resolution adopted today by the executive council of the American Hotel Association.

The resolution said hotel patrons, insisting that liquors be served with their food, are patronizing "so-called clubs, speakeasies and other like places to the exclusion of hotel dining rooms, resulting in a tremendous loss to this department of hotel operation as well as in appalling shrinkages in its invested capital."

FORMER GOV. JAMES M. COX.

WHEN James M. Cox, of Ohio, makes a speech perpendicular furrows take their place above the bridge of his eyeglasses and seem to be something like an earnest of his purpose. In repose, the countenance of Mr. Cox gives the impression of a man who should be called Jimmy and should not be harassed by his interest in public affairs out of being Jimmy.

There is a sort of a Sunny Jim atmosphere and appeal about him. But the stern American people want serious men to lead them, and probably, that is the reason why Jimmy Cox has the perpendicular furrows and is the dignified former Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio, who was the Democratic presidential nominee in 1920 and is at present not so dark a horse as to be left entirely out of consideration in the forthcoming national political sweepstakes.

He just about disrupted the Jackson day dinner of the Democrats in the Mapflower Hotel a few weeks ago. He was on his feet much longer than his allotted time, even though he cut his prepared speech short. The overtime was to be charged to a surprised and delighted audience who clapped and stamped and cheered. He flung into the teeth of the anti-Catholic South which had bolted Al Smith, the warning that Northerners had made it possible to bring to an end the degrading carpet-bagging days of reconstruction.

Other Democratic leaders have soft-pedalled or back-tracked on the League of Nations question. Mr. Cox hasn't. He took the baton from the hands of the dying Woodrow Wilson and ran his futile lap. Today he is making neither apology nor explanation, though others have sought to soften their past records.

But Mr. Cox was known throughout the country before he was made the Democratic nominee. He made a brilliant record as the Democratic Governor of Ohio. Before he was elected governor he was a member of Congress from Ohio for two terms, leaving to take the governorship.

Aside from such facts as have been set forth his biography might be set forth: Born on March 31, 1870 and raised on a farm; worked in printer's office; taught country school; became newspaper reporter; bought a newspaper, another, and another; along the route became involved in public business.

Torch Songs Are Facing Oblivion—In Ash Heap

By JOHN J. DALY

IT had to come.

America gave the world its torch songs, and torch songs in turn gave the world a heartache—and a headache.

Sophie Tucker, singing "Red Hot Mamma," one of the first of the breed, set a New York theater on fire. A frightened audience, burning with emotion one moment, rushed for safety the next, the place too warm even for a red-hot mamma. As the firemen came with the hose, the valiant orchestra leader struck up "River, Stay Way From My Door!"

The national debacle had to end sometime somewhere. Somebody had to put out the fire and quench the torch song. Just as well the beginning of the end came in a New York theater where the flame first started.

• • • •

THE handwriting is on the wall. The day of the torch song is over. Though the melody lingers on, people tire of hearing morons singing "Body and Soul," "Moanin' Low," "The Peanut Vender" and "Minnie the Moocher."

Memphis Mamie still sings "Today Today Blues." Mississippi Sarah and other poet laureates from various States, Michigan Michael and California Kate furnish torch songs with burning lyrics, but the torch song by the very brilliancy of its light is leading the procession down the long, long trail to Oblivion. When the last torch singer is silenced some one may moan, "Was that the Human Thing to Do?"—but what of it?

• • • •

LEARNED economists, students of human events, members of Congress trying to find a way out of the tax muddle, psychologists and all the rest, cast about, and wonder what caused the depression. The answer was always within reach, but never quite apparent until a jazz singer, crooning in a minor key, set a theater on fire.

The torch song weighed down the very soul of the Nation, carrying it into the subcellar of consciousness.

"The More You Hurt Me," is sadistic—and 1,000,000 torch singers, standing shoulder to shoulder, sighing and sobbing, singing sad songs, have about burned the soul of America to a crisp.

"How Long Will It Last?" a feverish favorite, almost answers its own question. In the Pickwickian manner of the day, "It Won't Be Long Now."

When the torch song goes, as it must, all of the synthetic sadness of the race will probably vanish with it

GERMANY DEMANDS EQUALITY ON ARMS

Nation Calls for New Pact to Include Provision for Security.

Geneva, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Germany called on the nations at the World Disarmament Conference today to draft a "Magna Charta of Armaments and Security" and to reduce their implements of war to her own level.

Count Rudolph Madolny, German Ambassador to Turkey, laid down a set of seven proposals and challenged his hearers with the statement that "Germany is already disarmed, and German disarmament must be considered indicative of the direction the disarmament of all other members of the league must follow."

He was followed on the program by the Haitian delegate, Constantin Mayard, who delivered the longest speech of the conference—7,000 words—to say that his country had been disillusioned because she had found herself at the mercy of a foreign force.

Upholds French Plan.

The situation had improved since the "Hoover good-will policy" had been instituted, he said, but Haiti will support the French disarmament plan because "a large part of the blood that flowes in our veins is French."

The German spokesman said his proposals were based on the principle that "in the future there can only be one system of disarmament equally applicable to all countries," and Germany would be unable to accept any other agreement.

"It would have been very simple for Germany to have proposed the application of the provisions of the Versailles treaty regarding Germany to general disarmament," he continued, "but she prefers a practical contribution which should have more chance of success."

The French plan did not solve the question of disarmament, he said, for "the need for security should not prevent disarmament. Those possessing small guns can not shoot with big ones, and those possessing not even a revolver can not shoot at all."

French Discount Proposal.

French reaction to the German suggestions was expressed in the words, "They are nothing new and nothing not already advanced by Germany during preliminary disarmament talks."

One spokesman said the plan was an attempt to shift the discussion from the party convention to the debatable ground of equality of armaments.

American Army and Navy experts immediately began a technical analysis of the German program and they will give Ambassador Hugh Gibson, chief of the American delegation, a detailed report on how it would affect the United States plan.

Chairman Arthur Henderson called a brief meeting of the steering committee for tomorrow morning to consult on the future program. The general sessions probably will end tomorrow without the French delegates having an opportunity to respond to Germany on account of the political crisis at home.

English Woman Changes Faith in Plane Over Sea

London, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—While a big Imperial Airways liner flew over the channel on the way from Croydon today passengers witnessed the ceremony by which an English woman renounced Christianity and was received into the Moslem faith.

She is the Dayank Muda of Sarawak, wife of the heir presumptive of the Rajah of Sarawak, a member of the English Broke family, which has held the title for generations. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Khalid Scheidrake, who announced that the princess had adopted the name Khairulnissa, "fairest of women."

Naval Affairs Groups To Be on Akron Monday

Lakehurst, N. J., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Members of the congressional naval affairs committeees will be aboard the dirigible Akron when she leaves her hangar Monday morning, February 22, for an all-day test flight.

The cruise will be taken, if weather is favorable, to demonstrate the ship's airworthiness to the committee investigating charges that she was malconstructed. Lieut. Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl will be in charge. The route of the flight will be determined after a study of weather reports, naval air station officials said today.

Disgusted Citizens Find Big Still and Wreck It

Lagrange, Ga., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Impatient at the failure of officers to halt the operations of a big liquor distillery, citizens of a rural community near here seized the still today and dumped it on the courthouse plaza.

Frank Hudson, spokesman for the raiding party, said residents of the community had grown "sick and tired" of the distillery's operations and seized it after officers failed to find it, although he claimed they had been advised of its location.

R. B. Carter, chief of county police, said he had heard nothing of the still until it was dumped on the plaza.

"We certainly would have found it if we had been notified," he added.

House Blocs Agree On Beer Bill Form

Measure for 2.75 Per Cent Beverage to Go Before Antidry Groups.

(Associated Press.)

The combined support of House Republican and Democratic antiprohibitionists will be sought shortly for a measure that would legalize 2.75 per cent beer and establish a tax of 3 cents a pint on the new beverage.

The bill, entitled "an act to raise additional revenue, and for other purposes," was agreed upon yesterday by the executive committees of both antiprohibition blocs. It will be presented to the full groups probably next week. Antiprohibitionists estimated it would raise about $500,000,000 annually in taxes and create a market for upward of 150,000,000 bushels of grain a year.

The executive committees reduced from 3.2 to 2.75 per cent the alcoholic content proposed in the measure in conformance with a recommendation by subcommittees.

Men Hired Exceed Number Laid Off

Manufacturing Industries Accession Rate for January Was 4.15.

(Associated Press.)

The Department of Labor reported yesterday that in January, for the first time since March, 1931, the number of men who went to work in manufacturing industries was more than those laid off.

"The all-manufacturing accession rate for January was 4.15," the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. "The total separation rate was 3.35. This is the first time since March, 1931, that the accession rate has exceeded the total separation rate."

In the ten industries for which separate figures were shown, automobiles had the highest accession rate, 9.39. The lowest accession rate, the bureau reported, was in the iron and steel industry, where the number of those who quit, exceeded those who regained employment.

World Court Issue Faces Senate Again

Friends of Adherence Plan Early Move for Ratification.

(Associated Press.)

The world court issue loomed again before the Senate last night with word that friends of American adherence intend an early move for ratification. Members of the foreign relations committee understand that a motion is to be made at the regular meeting next Wednesday to report out the revised protocol for American membership in the court.

Last night leaders of the opposing sides were preparing for action, and another gruelling debate on international affairs, intensified this time by conflicts abroad, lay ahead.

Opponents of the court, led by Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, are more optimistic than at any previous time. Friends are just as confident, but there seems to be no doubt the court has not got the strength in the Senate it had five years ago when adherence was voted with reservations.

SHORT SELLING CURB ISSUED BY EXCHANGE

Stock Market Officials Ban Lending of Securities, Except on Order.

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The New York Stock Exchange today fired another broadside at the bear interest in the security markets which has been fattening on profits ever since the market collapse of 1929.

The exchange announced after the close of the market today that on and after April 1, next, members of the exchange shall not "lend, either to themselves as brokers or to others, securities held on margin for customers unless they shall have obtained separate authorization in writing permitting the lending of such securities."

This action is one of a series of curbs placed by the exchange on short selling. The most recent restriction was an order that orders for short account must not be executed at a price lower than the preceding sale on the stock which the customer desired to sell. This, in effect, was designed to prevent "raiding" by making it necessary for a bear to await a steady, or preferably a rising market before he could place his orders.

Stimulates Budding Rally.

Advance reports that a new short selling restriction was about to be announced helped to stimulate a budding rally in stocks in the closing hour of trading.

Despite a morning break of $8 a share in Southern Pacific stock, following deferring by directors of that company's dividend late yesterday, the main body of industrial stocks held steady. Later they gradually advanced under influence of the Bank of England's action in cutting its discount rate to 5 from 6 per cent.

When preliminary rumors of the impendind Stock Exchange action reached brokerage circles late in the session it touched off a brisk rally closing trading. Shorts skirmished to get stocks with which to cover their commitments. The market surged ahead, with many stocks advancing $1 to $5 a share. The gain erased more than one-half of yesterday's loss in the market as a whole. Activity, however, was not particularly heavy.

Stocks Soar in West.

After the New York Stock Exchange had closed, reports reaching Wall street from San Francisco stated that the uprush was being continued in New York stocks traded in on the San Francisco Curb. Difference of time between the two cities made this possible.

U. S. Steel closed in New York at $49.50 a share, representing a net gain for the day of $2.50. Late reports from the San Francisco market quoted the stock above $51 a share. American Can, which closed $3.12 a share higher in New York, gained more than $1 a share additional on the West Coast.

The New York Stock Exchange ruling will make it increasingly difficult for shorts to borrow stock so that they can sell short. In the past, brokers executed general agreements with customers permitting the "loaning" of stocks for such purposes.

Cermak to Ask City Council To Cut 2,479 Off Pay Roll

Mass Meetings Are Called by Unpaid Teachers; Walkout Talked.

Chicago, Feb. 18. (A.P.).—Chicago, in the words of its mayor, faces its most serious crisis since the fire which destroyed it in 1871.

The city had borrowed to the limit of its bonding power. Its own citizens offered no market for its bonds. The legality of its tax bills was jeopardized in two unfavorable court decisions, and its employes were many millions behind in pay. The State Legislature convened to aid it, took a 60day recess without relief legislation.

In this extremity, Mayor Anton Cermak, with words of bitterness against a heedless Legislature, announced he would ask the city council tomorrow to cut 2,479 employes off the municipal pay roll.

"I don't know what else to do," he said. "But unless things straighten out, this cut may be followed by more."

Announcement of the slash sent representatives of 4,000 unpaid employes of Cook County, a homogenous jurisdiction, into a protest meeting. Fourteen thousand school teachers, unpaid since September, called mass meetings. Some of them talked of a "walkout."

Chicago officials and Illinois legislators indulged in mutual recrimination. Each group accused the other of ill faith. Cermak blamed the legislators for recessing their special session yesterday without accomplishing the principal purpose of its call—tax relief for Cook County. Downstate leaders called him "insolent" and "ungrateful."

Informed that officials of Detroit had appealed for financial help to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the mayor looked hopefully toward its $2,000,000,000 fund. He ordered the city attorney to investigate the possibility of an appeal in that direction. A conference of bankers was called to map some action.

ANTON CERMAK.

The city which will be host to the world next year in an exposition of its century of progress acted drastically today to collect its fast-mounting back taxes.

County bills for 1930, delayed six weeks in fruitless hope that the Legislature would approve bond issues funding them immediately, will go into the mails next week-end. They were due legally last January 1. County officials said they would set the penalty date, by which time they must be paid, at April 15 or May 1, and ask the next Legislature to legalize their action.

DRESS REHEARSALS OF MASQUE BEGUN

Margaret Anglin Appears With Hundreds Cast in "Wakefield."

The first dress rehearsal for "Wakefield" at Constitution Hall last night took on the aspect of a professional workout as the principals, with Miss Margaret Anglin in the leading role and the 700 or 800 supernumeraries, choristers and dancers, went through their paces in the various scenes and episodes which make up this folk masque by Percy MacKaye.

Mr. MacKaye was there to lend a helping hand to Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, who is directing the production. Miss Bess Davis Schreiner and Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, codirectors of personnel, brought their great groups into regular formation effectively.

John Tasker Howard, who wrote and compiled the music, was present, and Dr. Albert Harned's National Capital Choir boomed out their choruses. The Marine Band Orchestra, conducted by Capt. Taylor Branson, had its first try at playing with the entire ensemble.

Behind the scenes the costume room was falling into shape under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Higgins Sullivan and her corps of assistants.

Officials See Rehearsal.

Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, and Dr. George C. Havenner, of the District of Columbia Bicentennial Commission, witnessed parts of the performance. Both expressed themselves as pleased with the promising aspect of the production and feel that the second dress rehearsal, scheduled for tomorrow night which may continue indefinitely, will put the production in shape for a performance on the opening night which will do justice to the brilliant audience assembled to see it.

In the main cast are:

Margaret Anglin, the Rev. Dr. Earle Wilfley, Arthur White, Maurice Jarvis, Grace Peters Johnson, Robert Chase, Edward Muth, Hugo Schulze, Caroline McKinley, Wallace Wright, Ruth Harsha McKenzie, Thomas Cabill, Anne Ives, Eldred Wilson, Harry Schonrank, Black Bird.

Those in the Four Winds group are Alva Beavers, Anita Callahan, Emily Miller, Adele Whiteside.

In the Thirteen Stars and Orion and Cassiopela groups are Judy Lyeth, Betty Sleeper, Helen Foley, Virginia Alexander, Sandy Alexander, Jean Crashhead, Ellen Zilkie, Jessie Chase, Ruth Shoemaker, Rebecca Tarwater, Penelope Tarwater, Ruth Critchfield, Lilla La Garde, Martha Fisher.

In the fantastic episode of Uncle Remus are Reed Smoot Nibley, Wesley Eddy, Claude Clements, Preston Johnston.

The Vassals of Drift include the Carolyn McKinley Dancers and Robert Claflin, Helen Griffith, William Hospe, Alberta Smith, Gwendolin Tonahill.

NEW SHOALS BILL ORDERED FOR HOUSE

Private Leasing Would Be Goal, With U. S. Operation Alternative.

(Associated Press.)

New Muscle Shoals legislation—with a private lease as its first goal, but with the Government operation opposed by President Hoover as a second choice—was ordered drafted yesterday by the House military committee.

A group of seven, led by Representative Hill (Democrat), Alabama, was named to carry out the will of the committee after a 13-to-7 vote assured inclusion in the new bill of the Government-operation alternative.

McSwain Explains Plans.

Chairman McSwain explained that this controversial issue would be sandwiched in between two leasing proposals as follows:

"We instructed the committee that a very liberal leasing provision be incorporated in the bill and that if after a definite lapse of time—one or two years—there should be no lease, that the Shoals should be operated by a Government commission—either a Federal commission or a commission set up by Tennessee and Alabama.

"But there would be a second alternative—that if at any time after Government operation commences a leasing proposal is made to the President, he and the operating board shall have the power to execute a lease and deliver the property immediately to the lessee.

Three Aspects of Bill.

"Briefly, then, the bill would have three aspects—a lease first, then Government operation, and then a lease."

The bill President Hoover vetoed last year directed Government operation unless, within one year, a lease containing specific limitation on the use of the property should be contracted by the President. The President's commission recommended private operation by a lessee on terms agreeable to the President.

The leasing provision planned by the House committee would not be as liberal as that advocated by the Shoals commission. Members of Hill's group said it would more nearly approximate the requirements of last year's vetoed bill and would contain an absolute minimum on the amount of fertilizer that must be produced on the project.

New Hampshire's Filing Date Expires

Roosevelt Has Balanced Slate; Smith Men Are Not Lacking.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 18 (U.P.).—The deadline for filings or withdrawals of New Hampshire candidates for delegate to the Republican and Democratic national conventions was reached tonight, with Roosevelt Democrats serenely contemplating a harmoniously balanced slate completely pledged to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Democrats favoring the nomination of Alfred E. Smith, however, filed a somewhat topheavy, though complete ticket. The Roosevelt slate was neatly balanced geographically and racially, while the Smith ticket was concentrated in the City of Manchester.

Robert Jackson, secretary of the Democratic national committee and national committeeman from New Hampshire, was credited with the harmony that prevailed in the Roosevelt-pledged faction. From a field of eleven who wanted to attend the convention as Roosevelt-pledged delegates at large, he persuaded three to withdraw to eliminate possible conflict. The three will run as alternates at large.

Book on Capital Put on Sale As Feature of Bicentennial

A new book, tracing the history of the Nation's Capital from the time it was inhabited by wandering tribes of Indians, has been placed on public sale here in honor of the Bicentennial celebration of the birth of George Washington.

The book, entitled "Washington, the National Capital," has been in preparation for a number of years. It received the indorsement of the National Commission of Fine Arts and its publication was finally authorized by a resolution introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Simeon D. Fess.

Beginning with the aboriginal tribes which first inhabited this territory and their first contacts with the whites, the book recites the legislative steps toward selection of the Capital on the banks of the Potomac River and the inauguration of its first government.

The history of the city is described by decades and contains numerous illustrations. It deals with the construction of public buildings and parks and tells in detail the history of each memorial and private institution throughout the city. The publication was printed at the Government Printing Office and may be obtained there from the superintendent of documents.

exception to the rigid method by which it sought to apply it.

"Aside from the burden and delay of tremendously added accounting procedure which would be required by these two sections, I am satisfied that their apparently inflexible provisions will interfere seriously with some of the activities of this department," Secretary Hyde wrote the committee.

Roop Points Difficulties.

Director Roop of the Budget Bureau in proposing a new section, modifying the other two, pointed out the handicaps involved in handling temporary, emergency and seasonal jobs under the provision.

"If all appropriations for personal services were made on the basis that all positions would be occupied for the entire year, as was done in the case of statutory positions in certain appropriations prior to the enactment of the classification act, no mechanical difficulty would be met in operating under the provisions of these sections," he wrote the committee.

Director Roop further protested provisions requiring impounding of appropriations for positions when vacancies occur.

"If these sections were construed to require the impounding of the remaining amounts for positions where vacancies occur, as the language would appear to require, there would be left available sufficient funds in many cases for paying the remaining personnel for the balance of the year," he said.

Machinists Fight Sections.

N. P. Alifas, president of District No. 4, International Association of Machinists, opposed the two sections, or any modification of them.

"It is hardly worth while modifying them, because the intent is there of both saving appropriations and curtailing the Federal forces, and we are opposed to both of those propositions," he said.

"We think that there should be more Federal appropriations spent, because the money that is spent by the Federal Government is derived from taxation on the people in the United States, who really have the money."

Discussing the two sections dropped from the bill, the committee's report stated simply:

"These sections relating to compensation, filling of vacancies, promotions, and so forth, were eliminated without prejudice from the bill, where in conference more information would be at hand which would be necessary to perfecting the same."

The Agriculture appropriation bill reported yesterday contains $177,192,646 in appropriations, an increase of $1,783,832 over the bill as passed by the House, but $58,400,000 under current appropriations.

of others, never for himself, have placed him among the world's great men. From that eminence his character has acquired a status of half god or mighty hero that, to the average person, makes him more than a mortal. In his exaltation, much of the human side of the man has been sacrificed to portray this godlike estate. Yet Washington was not only the divinely appointed leador of the infant colonies, destined to lead them on to victory and to greatness, he was, likewise, a fine type of the educated Virginia planter of his day."

In answer to a question received yesterday by The Post Contest Essay Editor, a student who has passed his nineteenth birthday is not eligible to compete. However, if he or she are more than 18 years of age and have not reached their nineteenth birthday they may enter the competition.

Once more, the Essay Editor declared further, the contestants must be reminded that all essays must be countersigned with the name of the parent, teacher or guardian of the one making the entry. Only in this way may The Washington Post know that the essay is the work of a student and that he has not been assisted in its writing by any person, other than by consultation with books of reference and teachers on historical facts.

Essays received yesterday were from William A. Wilson, age 11, 173 V street northeast; Albert J. Yetter, jr., age 11, 232 Adams street northeast; Joseph Moore, age 14, 70 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Charles Jarvis, age 12, Bladensburg, Md.; William Durkin, age 13, 140 U street northeast; George Herbeck, 35 R street northeast; Harry Helberger, age 12, 29 W street northwest; Mary Ruth Kiernan, Laurel, Md.; Alice Catherine Knight, Laurel, Md.; Margaret Lepore, Laurel, Md.; Edith Anna Lonfellow, Laurel, Md.; Anna Rose Fairall, Laurel, Md.; Leo Wall, 205 S street northeast; Drusilla Carr, 509 Florida avenue northeast; Virginia Wise, age 13, 1240 Water street southwest; Jerry E. Connally, age 11, 30 K street northwest; Suzanne D. Miller, age 11, Beltsville, Md.

Those applying for the booklet were Rose Abert, 1500 Thirty-fifth street northwest; Vera V. Smith, Alexandria, Va.; Mary Flunor, Wallace, Va.; Barbara Frazier, Gaithersburg, Md.; Dorothy S. Cuff, Ashton, Md.; Edward L. Bennett, jr., 1280 Neal street northeast; Ruth Howe, 448 Lamont street northwest; Helen C. Connell, 1324 Harvard street northwest; Gladys Hill, 1549 Sixty-fifth street.

Hampton Denies Shouse's Charges

Declares He Did Not Lead Religion Move Against Smith in Carolina.

(Associated Press.)

Frank A. Hampton, secretary of the Democratic national senatorial committee in the 1922 and 1924 campaigns, yesterday denied as "unqualifiedly false" a statement by Jouett Shouse that he led a religious intolerance movement in North Carolina in 1928 to defeat Alfred E. Smith.

Hampton, a McAdoo manager in 1924, was also secretary to former Senator Simmons (Democrat), North Carolina, and is now counsel for former Senator Heflin in his contest against Senator Bankhead, of Alabama. He denied he was constantly associated with Republican headquarters in the last presidential campaign and said he had no apologies to make for refusing to support Smith.

Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, assailed Hampton after the latter had attacked his proposal to send uninstructed delegations to the next national convention. "I believe the Democratic voters will be too wise to walk into this trap," Hampton said yesterday. Under Shouse's plan, he said, a majority of the delegates would be selected by "Raskob, Smith, and Shouse by secret manipulation and intrigue."

FESTIVAL OF YOUTH PROGRAM PLANNED

More Than 30,000 Young People Expected to Take Part in Event May 14.

Tentative plans for the "Festival of Youth" exhibition which is to be held May 14 in honor of the George Washington bicentennial celebration were outlined yesterday by Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of playgrounds and general chairman of the committee on arrangements. Representatives from practically all organizations, dealing with recreation in the District were present as Miss Baker explained preliminary details and in general approved arrangements as presented.

According to the program suggested between 30,000 and 40,000 young folks, from elementary, high and preparatory schools, will take part in a demonstration on the Monument Grounds and Ellipse from Lincoln Memorial to Fourteenth street, starting at 1 o'clock and continuing until about 5:30. Schools, clubs, handcraft organizations, art students, nature students and all organizations dealing with the youth of the city have been invited to participate and exhibit their part in the development of the younger generation of Washington.

According to the plan every boy and girl who has some part in planning or who participates in the festival will receive a certificate testifying to the same. It will be possible for children who are unable to be on the grounds on May 14 to receive this award as they may assist in the early preparations.

Facilities for Exhibition.

All of the facilities in the boundaries named will be used in the demonstration including baseball fields, reflecting pools, polo grounds, municipal bathing pools, horseshoe courts, tennis courts and other recreation spots.

Miss Baker was authorized by the gathering to name what committees she thought necessary for planning and conducting the exhibition.

At 5:30 o'clock all of the groups will assemble at the foot of the Monument and pay homage to George Washington by song and recitation.

Among those present were: Miss Sybil Baker, general chairman, Festival of Youth; Mrs. Mildred Fonda Barnum, director, Bradford Home School; Lieut. F. B. Butler, public buildings and public parks; J. L. Carter, Noel House Boy's Club; Miss Mabel R. Cook, Girl Reserves, Y. W. C. A.; Miss Ella M. Crook, elementary school principal; Henry W. Tinkham's Defy Aimed at Cannon Challenges Churchman to Permit Trial Court to Hear Libel Suit.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, against whom Bishop James Cannon, jr., has filed a $500,000 libel suit, challenged the clergyman yesterday to permit a trial court to establish the truth of his charges. Tinkham told the House that "in order completely to expose this spurious self-designated moral leader and ecclesiastical whitened sepulcher, I challenge him to try his libel suit against me."

The Southern Methodist churchman filed the libel suit against Tinkham in the District of Columbia Supreme Court on June 3, 1931. Tinkham had charged in the House and in a later public statement—"divested of my congressional immunity"—that Bishop Cannon was a "shameless violator of the Federal corrupt practices act."

Recently, this court sustained the clergyman's demurrer to an indictment charging him with violating the law in 1928 by failing properly to report $65,300 in campaign contributions to his anti-Smith Democrats committee from E. C. Jameson, of New York.

KLAN CELEBRATION IS SET IN BALSTON

Event on Sunday Midnight Will Be in Charge of Howard E. Bitting.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 809. Clarendon, Va.

With a blazing fiery cross 70 feet in length, the Ballston Ku Klux Klan, No. 6, numbering more than 500 members, at the stroke of 12 midnight Sunday will usher in the 200th birthday anniversary celebration of George Washington. The event, which promises to be one of the greatest ever staged by the organization in Arlington County, will take place on the field at Clements avenue and Wilson boulevard, in Ballston.

The ceremonies, in charge of Howard E. Bitting, exalted cyclop of Ballston Klan, No. 6, will open with the singing of "America," followed with "The Star-Spangled Banner," as the American flag is raised. Music will be furnished by the Ballston Klan Band, numbering 35 pieces.

J. L. Baskin, of Richmond, Va., grand dragon of the Realm of Virginia, will be principal speaker.

Like celebrations will be held in all sections of the country, says Mr. Bitting.

The exercises will conclude with the singing of "The Old Rugged Cross," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

H. C. Smith Seeks Seat in Congress

Rockville Lawyer Enters Race for Republican Nomination.

Harold C. Smith yesterday announced himself a candidate for the Republican nomination as Representative to Congress, from the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland. The district includes the counties of Montgomery, Frederick, Washington, Allegany and Garrett.

Mr. Smith, a well-known member of the Rockville bar, announced his intentions saying, "so many of my friends have importuned me to declare myself for the nomination that I feel it a duty to now announce my candidacy."

TRUCK-TROLLEY CRASH IS FATAL TO FIREMAN

gine and No. 4 truck were called from the firehouse at New York avenue and M street northwest to answer a local alarm at the home of Dr. T. C. Smith, on Logan circle. It was an overheated furnace and caused no damage to the house.

Private George E. Clark, of 1334 Randolph street northeast, was driving the truck. He said he saw the street car heading south on Eleventh street just before he reached the corner of P street.

In an effort to avoid a crash he first cut the front wheels sharply to the left to get the heavy machine south into Eleventh street ahead of the street car. He saw he could not make the left-hand turn, whereupon he cut his wheels again to the right. He managed to get approximately 50 feet of the truck past the car before the crash.

The crash sent the truck lurching across the sidewalk and after pinning Corbett sent him sprawling into the street critically injured.

Tillerman Wolf was having a frantic battle on his high perch at the rear of the truck as Clark fought to save the apparatus from collision. The tillerman first cut his wheels to follow Clark's lead and then managed to swerve them again just before the impact.

He clung to his post until the truck banked into the first tree, when he was thrown into a heap on the pavement. The other firemen, fortunately on the front of the truck, managed to leap to safety.

Grocer Calls Ambulances.

Carl Pitler was in his grocery store at Eleventh and P streets at the time of the crash. He said he saw the crash was inevitable as he stood at the telephone. Pitler was placing a call for the fire rescue squad and ambulances as the accident occurred.

After crashing into the two trees and tearing down a mail box, the fire truck rammed into the automobiles of Anderson Moon and John Smith, parked near their home at 1112 P street northwest.

The two injured firemen were taken to Emergency Hospital by the fire rescue squad. Shortly after Corbett was admitted a Catholic priest was asked for and the Rev. William Strickler, of St. Matthew's Church, was called to administer the last rites of the church.

Dr. Daniel L. Borden, police and fire surgeon, also was called to attend to Corbett and Wolf.

Injured Motorman Hysterical.

Jones, the motorman, was taken to Garfield Hospital. In addition to his serious head injuries, he was in a highly hysterical condition. He was unable to talk after the accident, but marks on the street bore mute testimony of how he had attempted to stop his car. The sand box had been opened and marks showed where he had slapped the air brakes on and off.

The front end of his car had been crushed in by the impact. The car had to be pushed from the scene by a wrecking car of the street car company.

The firemen who escaped injury in the crash are Sergt. G. A. Cole and Privates E. M. Dennis and H. C. Hoy. There were two passengers on the street car. They both escaped injury and left without giving their names.

Corbett, who lived with his brother, Dennis, is also survived by another brother, James J. Corbett, and two sisters, Mrs. Maurice Cronin and Mrs. Michael J. Ready.

PHILIPPINES CALLED "HOSTAGE TO PEACE"

Writer Says Covetous Eyes Are Not on Them While U. S. Possession.

By VICENTE VILLAMIN.

In a recent book entitled "Philippine Uncertainty, an American Problem," the author, Senator Hawes, directs attention to the four-power treaty of 1922 under which, he says, America has agreed not to increase the existing defenses of the Philippines, and he gives the obvious naval vulnerability of the islands as a reason why America should relinquish her sovereign control thereover at the earliest practicable moment.

The clear implication is that security from external aggression must be one of the vital concerns of the Philippines. From this the query arises: If powerful America feels itself impotent to defend the islands, what chance is there for the defenseless Philippines to repel an invasion? It is a phase of the irony and artificiality of the situation that it is considered an act of friendship for the Filipino people to deprive them of American protection and cooperation, particularly at the wrong time.

Naval Equilibrium Plan.

In the first place, the four-power pact contains no provisions such as the author points out. But in section 19 of the naval holiday treaty a theoretical parallelogram was described in the West Pacific, including the Philippines, Hongkong, Formosa and other possessions, where the status quo in fortifications and naval bases shall be maintained. This provision is an integral part of the plan of naval equilibrium intended to be established in that treaty and is, in effect, although evidently futile, a step toward the demilitarization of the region.

In the second place, the four-power treaty has for its primary purpose the revocation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which is an epochal event in America's contemporary diplomatic history. It also commits the signatories as between themselves "to respect their rights in their insular possessions and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific Ocean." In other words, instead of being an invitation to hostile aggressiveness, the much-misunderstood treaty functions as stabilizer of international relations in the Orient.

Political Inducement.

It may be recalled that the political inducement and the territorial stake of America in becoming a signatory to this quadrilateral treaty is substantially the Philippines. The islands are protected as long as the treaty stands and is respected, but will lose the protection the moment they cease to be an "insular possession" of one of the signatories. It must be sadly admitted that in practice the military qualifications of the contracting parties have a great deal to do about the sanctity of treaties.

If the Anglo-Japanese alliance has not been scrapped and set aside by the four-power pact England would be found, today, by virtue of her commitments under the alliance, actively cooperating with Japan in the latter's military activities in China. Such a situation would make America's position in the premises rather difficult.

Frank Discussion Needed.

The question of international security is intertwined with Philippine independence. The need of the hour is frank and friendly discussion. The fate of the Belgian neutralization is too impressive to require reiteration; and from that landmark international relations have not advanced an inch. The ceremonious emasculation of the League of Nations in the Orient is a standing reminder that that majestic organization has never settled international controversies in that region.

The Philippines are a hostage to peace in a section of the world that is heavily charged with dynamite. As long as they are under the American flag they are not the object of covetous eyes and therefore not an apple of international discord.

America is the best-liked foreign country in the Orient. She exerts a stabilizing and moderating influence in Oriental affairs. And she is doing her best to keep the present Sino-Japanese collision from developing into a world conflagration.

Oratorical Praise Impedes Passage of Bank Credit Bill

Financiers Criticized as Timid as Friends of Measure in Senate Laud Its Provisions; No Opposition Develops in Five-Hour Debate.

(Associated Press).

The credit expansion bill rode the waves of Senate oratory yesterday headed to certain passage but impeded by too many laudatory friends.

More than five hours of talk, which included much criticism of the bankers as timid and fearful, failed to bring a word of opposition to the measure itself. Leaders were confident tomorrow will bring passage of the bill, which is intended to bulwark the banks of the Nation with the vast resources of the Federal Reserve System.

During the day, Col. Frank Knox, head of the President's antihoarding organization, disclosed that a concerted drive to bring dollars out of hiding by offering an issue of Government bonds in small denominations will be instituted soon. Detailed plans will be announced by the Treasury March 7.

Hoover Plans New Activity.

President Hoover himself contemplated additional activity in the antihoarding movement. He conferred during the day with George Whitney, New York banker; James G. Harboard, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, and Ogden L. Mill, Secretary of the Treasury.

Although none of the participants would discuss their parley, one of the President's secretaries said it had centered upon the antihoarding movement.

Two encouraging features in the general financial outlook were seen last night by the Federal Reserve Board in a cessation of hoarding and increased stock market activity. An increase in loans to brokers and dealers of $13,000,000 was noted, the first upward trend in these transactions since September.

The board's weekly statement also reported a drop of $17,000,000 in money in circulation, which was partially attributed to the drive to bring currency out of hoarding.

Would Ease Restrictions.

The credit expansion bill is designed to ease the restrictions of the Federal Reserve System so that bankers can obtain cash for securities not eligible for rediscount under present rules. In addition, it would make many millions of dollars of free gold available to the reserve system as a bulwark against foreign gold withdrawals or as backing for new bank note issues.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, opened the Senate discussion with a Democratic claim for originating the legislation. It is sponsored by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and Representative Steagall (Democrat), Alabama.

The party leader also carried forward the attack made Wednesday by Senator Glass on the "timidity and fear" of American bankers and gave assurance that the bill would stimulate business by enabling bankers to liquidate their assets and by increasing confidence.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, strongly disputed the attacks upon bankers as hoarders and asserted that the expansion of currency allowed under the bill was vital. He urged that the one-year limitation upon the new privileges be eliminated and the legislation made permanent. In this he was backed by Senator Morris (Democrat), North Carolina.

Fletcher Urges Stronger Terms.

Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, threw his support behind the legislation, but advocated even stronger safeguards against future threats of gold withdrawals.

Senators Glass and Walcott (Republican), Connecticut, who are guiding the legislation in the Senate, made no replies to the pleas for greater liberalization and predicted last night the mesure would be passed today in the form originally intended.

Meanwhile, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, continued the hearings of the Senate banking subcommittee on the Hoover bill to establish a home loan discount system.

Arthur I. Crandall, vice president of the Connecticut Association of Real Estate Boards; James H. McKay, of the Home Savings and Loan Association, of Youngstown, Ohio; Maco Stewart, president of the Guaranty Building & Loan Association of Galveston, Tex., and E. A. McDougall, New York builder, indorsed the legislation.

Stabilization of home ownership was seen in the administration's home loan banking system bill by O. K. LaRoque, deputy insurance commissioner and supervisor of building and loan associations for North Carolina.

Appearing in behalf of the bill before a Senate banking subcommittee, Mr. LaRoque said it provided means through which the home owner now faced with foreclosure and ejectment "may save his home through refinance of his mortgage without endangering the security of the funds invested by thrifty savers."

Henry J. Allen Is Named Assistant to Gen. Dawes

(Associated Press.)

Henry J. Allen, former senator from Kansas, has been appointed assistant to Charles Gates Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

After a conference with Gen. Dawes yesterday Mr. Allen said he would assume his duties this morning.

The Kansan did not know what his new duties would be. He has for the past several months been working at the State Department in connection with the St. Lawrence waterway.

The corporation, in a statement, said Mr. Allen's title will be "assistant to the president."

Gen. Dawes explained that he desired Mr. Allen's help to relieve himself of some of the pressure of work during these early days of the organization period.

The plan is for Mr. Allen to give, at present, only part of his time, due to his State Department duties.

MILLS WILL SUBMIT VIEWS ON TAX TODAY

Treasury Secretary to Send Draft of Proposed Sales Levy to Congress.

(Associated Press.)

The Treasury's views on proposed drastic changes in the revenue laws and a draft of a selected manufactures sales tax bill will be submitted today to the House ways and means committee by Secretary Mills.

New changes proposed include the repeal or modification of the capital gains and loss provision of the income tax, repeal of the provision allowing reductions in taxes on foreign investments, and repeal of the affiliated or consolidated income tax return provision.

These questions have been studied by a subcommittee with a view to forming a definite policy to be incorporated in the new $1,241,000,000 revenue bill needed to balance the 1933 budget. No agreement, however, has been reached.

Referendum Is Sent Out.

Meanwhile, the United States Chamber of Commerce sent a referendum to its members proposing that the Federal budget be balanced principally through reducing expenditures, with only moderate tax increases.

In a committee report, the Chamber said, "The primary emphasis should be placed on balancing the budget by reduction of governmental expenses, not by increased taxation." The results of the referendum are to be laid before Congress.

Forced to scan every possible source of revenue to accomplish its purpose in drafting a bill to meet the Government's operating expenses next year, the committee will consider the Treasury sales tax bill that is hoped to bring in about $600,000,000 through a 2 per cent levy. Mr. Mills has carefully explained the Treasury is not sponsoring the bill, but continues to insist that heavy excise taxes on a few big industries would be the most logical means of obtaining needed revenue.

No Agreement Reached.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, the Democratic leader and chairman of the sales tax subcommittee, said no definite agreement had been reached on the proposal or what form it would take. He added, however, that at least $800,000,000 should be raised in addition to increased income and inheritance taxes and revenue from a new gift levy.

"It will hardly be possible to raise more than $600,000,000 from a 2 per cent sales tax," Mr. Rainey said. "We figure the value of manufactured products next year will amount to $45,000,000,000. A 2 per cent tax would return $900,000,000, but foodstuffs, fertilizer and other manufactured products will be exempted, amounting to $300,000,000."

Mr. Rainey said the tax would be widely spread, but that it would not be a general sales levy.

Suburban Sanitary Bond Issue Offered Privately

A $150,000 bond issue of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission has been approved by the Maryland Public Service Commission, but no offers for the securities have been received. Proceeds of the sale were to be used for the extension of sewer and water lines in nearby Maryland.

The issues must now be sold privately, members of the Sanitary Commission say. The bonds bear interest of 4½ per cent. Two conditions were made by the Public Service Commission to the issue. The Sanitary Commission must notify the other body of the price received for the bonds and the other terms of the sale, and must report every six months the use made of funds from the issue.

Old Size Money Out Totals $573,000,000

(United Press.)

More than $573,000,000 in old-fashioned oversize paper currency is still lying about the country. This money, representing almost 9 per cent of all the paper money in existence, is believed to be held largely by hoarders. Banks have long since ceased using it and have turned it in for exchange for the smaller and handier size.

Treasury officials say it is entirely too early to decide just how much of the money is being hoarded and how much has been lost, destroyed or removed from circulation channels in other ways.

PENNSYLVANIA LINE RAIL QUIZ FEATURE

Activities Cited to Support U. S. Regulation and to Hit Merger Plan.

(Associated Press.)

The activities of the Pennsylvania Railroad were cited at separate hearings yesterday to support Government regulation of railroad holding companies and in opposition to the consolidation proposals of Eastern carriers.

Gov. Ely of Massachusetts said before Chairman Porter, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that many New Englanders believed Pennsylvania control of New England carriers undesirable, but that it dominated the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine.

He opposed a plan under which Eastern lines would be merged with the Chesapeake & Ohio, the New York Central, the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio. Gov. Case of Rhode Island, however, supported the four-line consolidation.

Dr. Walter Splawn, an economist specializing in transportation, said the Pennsylvania was approaching a position where it would be able to block rail consolidation proposals of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He told the House interstate commerce committee it appeared to be using the Penn Road Corporation a holding organization for acquiring control over other lines.

Gov. Winant of New Hampshire supported Gov. Ely's position. They said they spoke for the chief executives of Vermont, Connecticut and Maine, and stressed the fact that they were opposing the four-line plan only as it affected New England lines.

Man Accused by Woman Guilty of Simple Assault

A jury in Police Court yesterday found Herbert C. Bryant, 36 years old, of 1430 Rhode Island avenue northwest, guilty of simple assault in connection with an alleged attack he made upon Mary Castello, 4009 Marlboro place northwest. Judge John P. McMahon said that he would impose sentence February 27.

Bryant denied that he "attempted to kiss" Miss Costello. He said that she worked for him a few hours and then complained of feeling ill. When she demanded the full week's pay before leaving, he said, he refused, and she left the office. Bryant was arrested soon after the occurrence.

Former Magazine Editor Dies.

Philadelphia, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Arthur Peterson, 81, former editor of the Saturday Evening Post, died at his home here yesterday. After 25 years' service in the Navy, Peterson gave up the sea to become an author. He was editor of the Saturday Evening Post from 1868 until 1874, while his father, Henry Peterson, was publisher.

CHICAGOAN NAMED TO TREASURY POST

James H. Douglas, Jr., Is Appointed Assistant Secretary.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday named James H. Douglas, jr., of Chicago, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, replacing Arthur A. Ballantine.

The vacancy was created when Ogden L. Mills advanced to Secretary of the Treasury and his post as Undersecretary was filled by Ballantine.

Douglas is the son of a Chicago manufacturer, connected not only with a prominent cereal manufacturing concern but also with sugar and packing interests.

Finance His Hobby.

Chicago, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Finance has been the hobby and the business of law-trained James H. Douglas, jr., who was appointed today Assistant Secretary of the Treasury by President Hoover.

Educated at Princeton, Harvard and Cambridge to be a lawyer, Douglas soon plunged into financing and, at 33, is a partner of Field, Glore & Co., nation-wide investment house. He is one of Chicago's youngest executives.

Conservative by nature, Douglas refused to pin his hopes too securely on receiving the appointment.

Douglas was a student at Princeton when the war broke out. In August, 1918, he became a second lieutenant of machine gun instruction and spent six months at Camp Hancock, near Augusta, Ga., teaching recruits. After the war he reentered Princeton and was graduated in 1920. Then he spent a year at Cambridge, in England, entered the Harvard University Law School and was graduated in 1924. For five years he practiced law with a leading Chicago law firm. In 1929 he became associated with Field, Glore & Co.

Family Socially Prominent.

Douglas' father, James H. Douglas, was chairman of the executive committee of the Quaker Oats Co. when he died a year ago, leaving a $3,000,000 estate.

The Douglas family long have been prominent socially on the fashionable North Shore. Douglas' marriage to Miss Grace McGann, of Lake Forest, was a social event of 1927. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas and their son, James H. Douglas 3d, reside on Lake Shore Drive in Chicago.

He belongs to several clubs and for recreation plays golf, tennis and racquets.

Kiwanis Club Plays Host To Stars of Show Troupe

A real "double bill" of headliners were guests at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club in the Raleigh Hotel yesterday. The members were entertained with an address from Representative Sol Bloom, of the Bicentennial Commission, and songs by three members of the cast of "Hot-Cha," Buddy Rogers, June Knight and Tito Carol.

Representative Bloom stressed the opportunity the Bicentennial affords to the people of Washington as hosts to more than 3,000,000 persons. President Eugene R. Woodson presided. At next Thursday's luncheon, 300 Kiwanis attending the National Education Association convention will be guests of the local club.

AMERICA TO DELAY FURTHER MOVES FOR PEACE IN ORIENT

spokesman at the Tokyo foreign office were believed to have been responsible for the report that the United States initiated the peace appeal of the League of Nations to which the Japanese government is violently opposed. It was authoritatively denied here yesterday that the United States had any connection whatsoever with the league's peace appeal. Neither Secretary Stimson nor American Ambassador Hugh Wilson at Geneva had any part in suggesting the appeal to the league, as this country has scrupulously confined its league activities to American concurrence with action taken outside the scope of the league covenant.

The proclamation of the independent Manchurian state fell upon stony ears in official American circles yesterday. The Japanese authorities elaborately proclaimed the independence and sovereignty of the Manchurian state and entertained former Chinese Gen. Ma Chan-shan. The new president is expected to be the former Boy Emperor of China, who has remained in seclusion since he was driven from the home of his ancestors.

May Not Be Recognized.

It is not believed here, however, that the United States will recognize the new government. No efforts to bring the subject to the formal attention of the State Department have yet been made, and it is believed that when this has been done, the United States will be guided by the principles of Secretary Stimson's manifesto of January 7. This is the formal denial of any recognition to a situation arising out of the present chaotic conditions now in China.

At that time Secretary Stimson said:

"In view of the present situation and of its own rights and obligations therein, the American Government deems it to be its duty to notify both the Imperial Japanese Government and the government of the Chinese Republic that it can not admit the legality of any situation de facto nor does it intend to recognize any treaty or agreement entered into between those governments, or agents thereof which may impair the treaty rights of the United States or its citizens in China including those which relate to the sovereignty, the independence or the territorial and administrative integrity of the Republic of China."

situation many times worse than that which now confronts us. We could not export our cotton, wheat, wheat products or manufactured articles of any description, and hence the price of these articles would be greatly depressed and we would be without storage facilities for those which we could not consume ourselves.

Peril of Economic Ruin.

"Millions of people would be thrown out of work and our planters and farmers would face economic ruin. We would be deprived of such essential raw materials as manganese, tin, shellac, mica and rubber, without which we could not make steel or manufacture automobiles or machinery, either steam or electric.

"We would lack coffee, tea, quinine and other articles which are so generally and widely used as to be necessary for the comfort and welfare of our people.

"No nation has a greater interest in keeping the seas free for trade than has the United States.

"I believe that the welfare and safety of the United States require that our Navy should be built up to the limits and ratios permitted under the London and Washington treaties."

Chairman Hale of the Senate naval committee last night predicted a report would be made to the Senate next week on his gigantic naval construction bill. The Hale bill would authorize the Government to build up the Navy to the size allowed by the London Treaty and gives blanket authority for construction involving new ships costing more than $600,000,000.

Robbers Take $12,900, Kidnap Banker and Flee

Hartman, Ark., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The Bank of Hartman was robbed today of approximately $12,900 by two young men who abducted the assistant cashier, Buster Thompson, but they let him out of their automobile at the nearby town of Altus after giving him a dollar and some cigarettes.

They later abandoned their car in the outskirts of Ozark after it went into a ditch, and fled on foot into the hills with posses of officers and citizens in close pursuit. Some of the money was left in the car.

Canadian Money Orders Wrongfully Discounted

(Associated Press.)

The Post Office Department yesterday warned recipients of Canadian money orders not to allow them to be discounted by banks and commercial concerns in this country. Complaints have been received that banking institutions are discounting these orders at a rate of 14 per cent and in doing so profiting 14 cents on every dollar.

The Canadian dollar is worth 86 cents in American money but under a postal agreement the Canadian senders must deposit $1.14 in Canadian money for every American dollar the payee will receive. When sending money orders to Canada from this country the sender is required to deposit $86 to transfer an order to Canada to be redeemed at $100 in Canadian money.

JAPAN'S ULTIMATUM.

Japan has apparently decided on war against China. Peace negotiations have once more broken down, and the ultimatum which Gen. Uyeda has sent to the Chinese forces defending Shanghai is a further step toward the achievement of Japan's aims. China could not accept it without ignominiously surrendering Chinese soil and Chinese rights.

The Japanese government has sent an army to invade China. Now the army offers to let the Chinese withdraw from their own soil without further bloodshed, providing they will guarantee to stop all anti-Japanese activities. This ultimatum is another act of aggression, following the Japanese suggestion last week that all of China's commercial cities be internationalized.

China is willing to go half way in a compromise for peace. In spite of the fact that Chinese soil is being invaded, the Chinese have offered to withdraw from the Shanghai zone if the Japanese would do likewise. But the Japanese went to Shanghai to stop anti-Japanese activities, and now they can not relinquish their quest because of Chinese opposition. Conditions are ripe for extended war between China and Japan.

There are some indications that the Tokyo government considers the opening of hostilities at Shanghai a blunder. China was weak and unorganized. The National government had allowed the Japanese to seize Manchuria without a struggle. The stubborn resistance which has held the Japanese at bay in Shanghai and Woosung for three weeks was not expected. But having once launched a punitive expedition against China, Japan has been unable to withdraw without humiliation. Regular troops and vast stores of equipment for a showdown fight have been sent to Shanghai, but China has matched each move by bringing up reserves. The Nineteenth Route Army is now equipped with heavy field artillery and antiaircraft guns, and is prepared to put up a desperate fight. Chinese public sentiment has also been aroused. This immense nation is steadily uniting its factions against a common foe.

If the Chinese hold firm, Japan will be in a most distressing situation. Even if the invaders should succeed in dislodging the defenders from their position in and about Shanghai, they will accomplish nothing. More bitter sentiments against Japan will be aroused; further retaliation can be expected.

These considerations were doubtless back of the recent attempts by neutrals to negotiate a peaceful settlement. But Japan insists upon impossible concessions or war. Minor issues are lost in the ominous approach of the Japanese drive. The impending battle is apparently to be the signal for declarations of war. What the nature of that war will be, and what complications will result, involving other nations, are beyond certain calculation.

CREDIT UNIONS APPROVED.

The Senate District committee has placed its stamp of approval on the Capper anti-loan-shark bill, and indications are that it may be passed by the Senate this week. Under the terms of this measure seven or more presons having a common bond of interest or occupation could, with the sanction of the District Commissioners and the Comptroller of the Currency, incorporate a credit union for the purpose of extending loans to persons of small means.

Washington has tried in vain to get rid of parasitic loan sharks who charge exorbitant rates of interest to persons in dire need. This type of swindling will continue to be practiced until a better method is provided for supplying credit to persons with small incomes and no collateral. It is not to be expected that the Capper bill would drive all loan sharks out of Washington. But it would be a step in the right direction.

No new principle is involved in the credit union plan. Laws similar to that proposed for the District have been enacted in 35 States. Approximately 245 credit unions have been organized through the Postoffice Department in various sections of the country. Such unions can supply a definite need for credit within compact groups that might otherwise become the victims of trickery and fraud.

The Senate can do the District a substantial favor by passing this bill at an early date so that it will not be lost in the shuffle of important measures in the House.

RECONSTRUCTION BONDS.

Col. Knox, head of the President's Anti-hoarding Commission, apprehends that the only difficulty about floating a popular issue of small bonds might be in securing a sufficient quantity of them to satisfy the demand. Whether he is right or not, there is no doubt that such securities, to almost any amount, will be quickly absorbed throughout the country. There is every reason to believe that the American people will be as eager to secure such Government securities as the banks and big investors are to take up the larger Treasury issues.

It will not be at all surprising to see the securities subscribed two or three times over. The demand will come, not alone from the hoarders who have hidden away $50 or $100, but also from many who have funds in safe deposit boxes, where they are just as idle as the small sums buried in the back yard or hidden away in the mattress.

During a flood in a mid-Western city recently the vaults of a local bank were inundated so that the contents of the lockers had to be removed. The bank has a capital of $500,000, and nearly $400,000 in currency was taken from the strong boxes. For this class of timid hoarders a Government bond will afford the same security as gold and will, of course, have the added attraction of earning interest.

The fear expressed in some quarters that the movement to discourage the money-hiders would still further scare the more timid and ignorant ones appears unjustified, since the very discussion of the movement has had a good effect. But, undoubtedly, the campaign can be much more effectively and quickly concluded if in addition to the arguments presented an interest-earning alternative to currenscy can be offered for the more cautious citizens who will not risk their savings in industrial securities or deposit them in a bank. It is to be anticipated that the organization being formed by Col. Knox will experience no difficulty in selling baby bonds directly to the people. There will not be the patriotic appeal of war-time necessities, but the argument of enlightened self-interest will be effective.

CULTIVATE HOME MARKETS.

During normal times there is no such thing as a saturation point for business of any kind in the United States. Yesterday's luxuries become today's necessities in never-ending procession under American standards of living. Innumerable comforts that were beyond the reach of even very well-to-do families a generation or two ago have become common articles of everyday use in the homes of day laborers. When the number of automobiles in this country grew to more than 20,000,000 and it was figured that every man, woman and child in the United States could ride at once it began to be feared no more could be sold except for replacement. But it soon developed that when wage earners could afford a car more affluent members of society began to find the need for two or three.

The same thing has been experienced in many other lines. New inventions, labor-saving devices and others adding to convenience or pleasure find new fields to develop and in the course of a few years provide business of a magnitude that formerly it required a century to amass. No other country in the world takes so readily to modern innovations; indeed, in nearly every domain of modern progress the markets of the United States provide a greater field than all the rest of the world combined. Here in this country is found a population that does not have to be educated from the ground up as to the desirability of owning present-day improvements. All want them, and they pay in gold.

It has long been contended in these columns that the time, effort and expense devoted to securing foreign trade would, in the case of most American industries, bring greater and safer returns if expended in this country to extend the number of customers in the great home market, or to expand consumption. Today every American is a prospective customer for a very large proportion of all American products. In many foreign lands less than 10 per cent of the population can be counted upon as possible users of American goods and then for only a fractional part of the great variety of things here produced.

The truth of this situation will be more keenly appreciated this year and next than ever before. The depression has caused a notable decline in American exports, and no country is in a position to resume the extensive buying of three years ago. It is plainly evident now that the United States will be the first to recover. With its currency unimpaired, with credit being revived and economic adjustments being made, there is every reason to believe the coming months will see very material improvement in all lines of endeavor in the United States. Finance and industry will have to join agriculture in the realization that, for the present, activity and output must be applied to this country's needs. A more intensive devotion to the home market will result in the establishment of American business that will be larger and more profitable than when more dependence was placed upon foreign trade.

VETERANS' HOSPITALS.

In an address before a section of the American Medical Association this week Secretary Wilbur expressed a belief that the Government has built enough veterans' hospitals. His advice is worthy of serious consideration.

During the brief period since the World War the Government has invested enormous sums in hospital facilities. Last year Congress voted to spend more than $20,000,000 for new hospitals and additions to old ones. A program of construction designed to extend over five years was adopted. At that time Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, made clear that no new hospitals were needed to take care of veterans disabled by their war service. Congress voted this additional sum on the theory that the Government ought to take care of needy veterans who are sick regardless of whether their ailments have any connection with their service in the Army or Navy. A slight extension of this theory would offer free hospitalization to any citizen who might be in need.

In spite of that liberal program enacted into law only a year ago, bills calling for the construction of about 30 more hospitals have been introduced in the Senate. If the House is running true to form it will produce several times that number of hospital bills, with dozens of congressmen, mayors, governors and chambers of commerce pressing for their adoption. A most serious situation is thus presented.

To make the picture of folly and extravagance complete it is only necessary to add that the present law encourages veterans to stay in hospitals and soldiers' homes even after they are well and capable of caring for themselves. Disabled veterans of the World War may go into a hospital for treatment, having all their expenses paid, and still draw their full compensation. It is to their advantage to stay as long as possible. As a result these institutions are being filled up with men who are completely rehabilitated, but who have no incentive to assume life's responsibilities so long as Uncle Sam will give them board and lodging as well as liberal compensation.

Administration leaders made an effort last year to cut down the allowances to veterans while they are in hospitals and homes, but they were frustrated by the so-called Progressives of the Senate. Until such an amendment is adopted the Government must squander taxpayers' money and demoralize veterans.

Whence will this vicious circle of veterans' legislation lead if Congress continues to spend more for hospitals and then liberalizes the restrictions upon veterans who may use them? When the peak of disability from the war has passed, the Government will have on its hands extensive hospital facilities and no legitimate use for them. The temptation in Congress to open them to any one in need of medical care will be great. In this situation lie the seeds of a bureaucracy more formidable than any in which the Government has indulged. It is time to call a halt to this political stampede to win the soldier vote.

Congress is debating over charity to the American people. What they really want is for Congress to give them some reason for faith and hope.

In giving out his statement injecting strife into the Democratic party, former Gov. Smith gave the proper explanation. He said "I am a Democrat."

The newly named Supreme Court justice plans to keep his sense of humor. He will find a lot at the Capitol to help him.

Each time the world powers warn Japan to get out of Shanghai the Japanese pass the warning along to the Chinese.

JOHN HANSON

From the New York Times.

Attention is called by publication today of a "Life of John Hanson" to one whom Washington himself congratulated on his "appointment to fill the most important seat in the United States." The time was November, 1781, the office referred to was that of "President of the United States in Congress assembled," and its first incumbent, elected unanimously on the first day of the session, was John Hanson, of Maryland. Washington's letter was written two days after his reception by Hanson in the presence of Congress, sitting in Independence Hall, upon his triumphant return from Yorktown. It thanks "Your Excellency" with "great sincerity" for the "very polite manner" in which "you had rendered me the advantages of your correspondence."

Whether the two met again is not stated. Washington's diaries for the three years following Hanson's election were lost, and Hanson, who served but one year, died after a long illness in 1783. But their figures in bronze confront each other in Statuary Hall, Hanson, representing Maryland, with Charles Carroll at his side, while Washington and Robert E. Lee represent Virginia. Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, said at the ceremonies of unveiling that tardy justice had been done even by Maryland to a man "whose eminence in public service had been almost lost in the waste of time."

The Dictionary of American Biography, in its recent eighth volume, gives ample recognition to Hanson's outstanding activity and achievement. He led the fight for the cession to the United States by the several States of lands which they claimed outside of their borders, holding that they should be the common property of the United States "to be parceled out by Congress into free, convenient and independent governments." Maryland refused to agree to the articles of confederation till that assurance was given. To have had a major part in this accomplishment is Hanson's chief title to remembrance. His election as President was the immediate recognition of that service to the Union.

As "President" he had no such powers and duties as are now devolved upon the President of the United States. He was merely the presiding and executive officer of Congress, but "took precedence of all and every person in the United States."

Little is known about his personality and habits. But there must have been something of romance in the life of one who was descended from Roger de Rastnick, of the ancient parish of Halifax, on the one side, and from Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, on the other.

POST HASTE.

A lot of us will agree with Senator Carter Glass on the desirability of making the "free gold" available, and he can be assured of a good attendance if he will mention the time and place of the distribution.

Democrats are having trouble to find enough positive issues for one party, let alone distinguishing differences for seven prominent candidates.

"What we need today is not narrow men, but broad men sharpened to a point." Prexy Butler is wrong again; we have plenty of pinheads.

The Ford plant has a machine that smashes an automobile to scraps at one blow. Several truck drivers hereabouts are evidently practicing to run it.

Complaint comes from Democrats that Republicans are trying to claim all the credit for the credit measures. Those who read the newspapers can tell them there never has been such general praise of nonpartisan cooperation.

"Japan must save face." If Japan can stand all the things that are being said to her face she must have outgrown the old countenance-salvaging game.

Bryan, jr., has figured it out that the gold debts of the world and the world's annual business amount to more than 100 times the value of the world's eleven billions of monetary gold, so he demands the remonetization of silver. The world's stock of silver is not as valuable as its stock of gold, and added to the world's money would not materially change the overwhelming necessity for the use of credit in modern business.

The best way to stop France from nibbling at her New York gold balance would be to try to hand it to her all at once.

Trotzky comes to life to explain that Russia can't fight Japan now because she has to be ready to battle Germany in case Hitler's Nazis win. Leon's diet of Turkish delight is taking effect.

Gov. Murray of Oklahoma threatens to call out the militia again to defy a United States Court order on interstate trucks. As President Bill would have a regiment of regulars bivouacked right in the White House back yard.

New York's famous Palace Theater stage burst into flame as Sophie Tucker finished singing "Red Hot Mamma!" It seems a European trip can add caloricity even to Sophie.

Whether aimed at Germany, Geneva or M. Laval there ought to be something right cute to say about France ordering 50,000,000 gas masks.

Congress will hate to give the President authority to reorganize the executive departments of the Government, but it knows it can't do it itself.

Some old-timers can remember when the official yell of Wall street was "less government in business," and now listen to its yelps for help.

Trusting you noticed that Japan will not recognize the "free" Manchurian state with Japanese "advisors" until it has demonstrated it has all the attributes of an independent nation. PAUL HUDSON.

Japan Has the Claws, But No Strength Behind Them.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THERE will be no war with Japan—unless one is forced upon her.

When the final test comes, Japan will make concessions rather than fight—for the simple reason that a weak nation does not deliberately attack a strong one.

You read in your newspapers that Japan has a standing army greater than that of the United States, plus a trained reserve of millions; that Japan has 26 modern cruisers to America's 18, 77 destroyers to America's 71.

But modern military power depends upon resources. And Japan is incredibly poor.

Her big industry is silk, and America takes three-fourths of her output. Without America's patronage she would be bankrupt.

She has fewer cotton spindles than North Carolina.

Her output of iron is less than that of the tiny principality of Luxemburg.

Her total reserves of iron ore, at home and in Korea, do not equal the amount produced and consumed in America every two years.

In other metals and in coal she is equally poor.

That explains her lust for conquest in Manchuria.

Her South Manchurian Railway rights give her half of the iron in China. The Anshau field alone is supposed to contain 200,000,000 tons.

These rights also give her tremendous stores of coal. At Fushum she has the thickest coal seam in the world—a seam 420 feet wide and 130 feet, that can be worked from the surface. This mine alone is estimated to contain over a billion tons of soft coal, and near it is the Yantai, estimated at 20,000,000 tons of semianthracite.

What is more, Fushum's shale is now producing 50,000 tons of fuel oil a year.

When Japan has these resources in full production—say ten years from now—she will be ready to attack America or any other sleeping giant with a fair prospect of winning.

At present she is the weakest of great powers, economically, and would remain harmless if she were not permitted to finish the rape of Manchuria or keep the loot stolen from China.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Roosevelt Rightly Protests.

Boston Transcript.

Franklin D. Roosevelt would have shown himself less of a politician than a candidate for President of the United States has any right to be if he had fallen in with the suggestion of Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee, that unpledged delegations should be sent to the national convention. It was a beautiful theory, the identical theory, in fact, upon which originally the actual election of a President was contemplated by the founders, but it did not work long, and it never has worked since. From the point of view of Mr. Shouse, an unpledged convention would assemble and solemnly and honestly nominate the man it deemed best fitted to fill the presidential chair. From the point of view of Gov. Roosevelt, the nomination would be made a matter of "barter and trade," with the delegates manipulated by the most powerful politicians in the country.

Quick Flops.

Detroit News.

The Briton who brought over a car capable of turning corners at 70 miles an hour got a rather light hand from a country that had just seen Baker and Roosevelt do an about-face on the league while running.

Now It Comes Out.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

Recent developments give some hint as to why Japan was so touchy about those American fliers last summer. There must have been a lot for expert eyes to see.

Al Won't Run—Away.

Topeka Capital.

Al Smith doesn't choose to run, but will take it if it is offered to him. There is a fine distinction somewhere here between running and taking it if you can get it.

Two Unhappy Warriors.

Christian Science Monitor.

Events of the preconvention campaigns for the Democratic presidential nomination make increasingly clear the depth and seriousness of the division between forces which once were one. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the man to whom he gave the admiring sobriquet of "the happy warrior" are now involved in a political warfare over which neither is very happy.

Notwithstanding the insistence of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith that he is not a "candidate," though he would accept the nomination, there is a faction in the Democratic party which will make him its candidate, at least for bargaining purposes. Close on the heels of Mr. Smith's "Barkis is willin'" statement—so close as to appear part of a single political maneuver—came a recommendation by Mr. Jouett Shouse, Chairman Raskob's manager of the Democratic national committee's headquarters, that the States should send uninstructed delegations to the national convention in Chicago.

Gov. Roosevelt finally has taken the field against this evident effort to checkmate his candidacy for the nomination. While he still aims no shafts at the man whom he placed in nomination at Houston and whose support helped make him governor, he does take issue with Mr. Shouse.

Boresome Boards.

Los Angeles Times.

Senator Glenn, Illinois, Republican, will lead a fight to eliminate the many revenue-sapping bureaus, boards, commissions and other barnacles that through the easy-going years have attached themselves to the ship of state. In his battle he will have the moral support of a lot of us who are of the opinion that Uncle Sam has carried paternalism to the point where he is a meddlesome old relative, and others who think that the Goddess of Liberty has become a back-seat driver.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Common Soldier Offers a Few Sensible Reflections on Hard Times.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hard times demands lots of good, hard common sense and here are a few splinters:

If out of work hunt for a job, since jobs will not hunt you. If you don't find it the first day, turn up fresh on the trail next morning.

Be thankful day by day to the Almighty that you live, love and are loved. If you don't enjoy these blessings it is your own fault.

Don't croak about hard times. We all have them and will be better when we recover.

Do not scold your best friend on earth and call her extravagant until you have cut off all your own sensuous pleasures. When you have all these amputated gently hint to her that she looks best in a four-bit hat. She will not agree with you—notwithstanding the fact that it is often so—but she will wear it to please you. But be very mild in approaching so delicate a subject.

Hard times are usually rocky on a street corner. It is the poorest place on earth for contentment.

It is cowardly to give up. Hard times is a sieve which separates sensible people from fools and those of tender hearts from those of hearts of stone.

Keep sweet, hustle around and trust in the Lord, and you will at once be in the vicinity of contentment.

Do not be thankful that you are not as other men, but that you are as other men, and that you are suffering with them. You want to be human and humane.

If you are kind, true, honest, courageous and love our neighbor as ourselves, we can be happy in spite of hard times, hence richer.

Don't abuse the wealthy, for many of them won it legitimately, and you would do the same if opportunity came your way.

Monopoly is domineering and hard to bear, but there are lawful and orderly methods of curbing this oppression. By resorting to illegitimate methods we make ourselves what we condemn in the monopolist.

Keep cool and you will not act the fool. A COMMON SOLDIER.

Only One Way to Prevent War—That Is to Teach Its True Nature.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Disarmament conferences by the dozen will not tend to create a peaceful world. There will always be jealousy among nations. There is only one way to have permanent peace, that is, to educate young men as to the true nature of war. The wars of today are not like the gallant knights fighting in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

War today is highly modernized, or rather mechanized. Guns miles away inflict terrible casualities upon innocent women and children who occupy the cities that are fired upon. Airplanes drop bombs which do equal damage to innocent people. When youngsters realize what war really is, then the world will be ready to face peace permanently. R. L. K.

Spread the Work Out and Hoarding Will Cease, Says Unemployed Man.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Hoarding comes from fear and uncertainty. If the jobs which are to be had were more evenly distributed there certainly would be less hoarding. As it now is the manufacturer, instead of hiring more help, just makes the present employes work overtime and makes things worse, because the worker hoards his extra earnings for fear that he, like his neighbor, will also be thrown out of work.

Spread the work out so that more people can spend money for a living existence. UNEMPLOYED.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

JOCK McFEE'S SAD EXPERIENCE.

Said Jock McFee a friend of mine in a brogue I can't repeat:
"I'll take no rides from strangers now that I may chance to meet.
They may bid me share their company
but I'll smile and let them pass,
And I'll wait to ride in the city bus which never runs out of gas.

"He looked the gentleman every inch as up to the curb he came.
'Would you care to ride to the town,' said he. And how could I know his game,
Since a penny saved is a penny earned, and bus fare's more than that.
I gladly climbed in his motor car and settled myself to chat.

"We skipped along for a block or two, when a sputtering sound was heard.
'I believe I am out of gas!' said he;
'but how fortunate this occurred
As close to a station as we are. We'll fill up the tank right here.'
Then I saw him fumble his pockets through and fancied his face looked queer.

"'I am sorry, my friend, to tell you this, but I haven't a cent with me.
Will you lend me enough to pay for the gas, until next we meet,' said he,
Which I did, reluctantly, I confess, for I made up my mind right then
That many a year would come and go ere ever we'd meet again.

"And now though the snows are drifted deep and the winds are blowing strong,
I'll gladly stand on the curb and wait
'til a bus shall come along.
I'll remember this sad experience, and a cold, cold day 'twill be Ere another stranger into his car shall lure old Jock McFee."

Leo Kolb, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mr. Isaac Gans, Mr. Robert V. Fleming, Col. Harrison H. Dodge and Mr. Thomas E. Campbell.

Missouri Colonial Ball Tomorrow.

Missourians are showing great interest in the colonial ball to be given tomorrow evening at the Washington Hotel. Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, with Mrs. Thomas Sterling, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Col. Charles Dasher and Mrs. L. R. Eakin have beeen chosen to judge the costumes of the evening. It is anticipated that the judges will experience difficulty in awarding the six prizes to be offered for the most appropriate, the most beautiful and unique costumes.

Mrs. Charles Keyser, chairman, of entertainment, has secured interesting talent. Mr. George O'Connor will sing a group of songs, and the Capitol Society of Children of the American Revolution, under the direction of Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, will dance the minuet in costumes. Dancing will be in order the early part of the evening and cards will be provided for those who wish to play.

It is eminded that the Missouri Society will participate with the other States in the Bicentennial ball to be given Monday at the Shoreham Hotel.

The Georgia State Society will hold its formal leap year dance tonight at Meridian Mansious. All Georgia girls attending local schools have been invited to attend in order to have plenty of lady stags and it is expected that the ladies will do all the breaking and make all requests for dances.

The floor committee will consist of twelve Georgia girls under the chairmanship of Miss Ina Russell, sister of Georgia's governor.

During intermission an elaborate program will be furnished by Miss Edith Reed, who will be present with Miss Dorothy Skinner, Miss Frances Williams, Miss Veronica Cunningham and Miss Jane Howard.

The bridge tournament will continue as usual under the direction of Mrs. S. Gordon Green.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

MONOXIDE POISONING IN INDUSTRY.

THERE are many industries essential to community life which expose their employes to chronic carbon monoxide poisoning. One way or another, certainly more than 1 per cent of the total population is exposed to this hazard. There is greater interest in acute poisoning by this gas because the circumstances of the reported cases are usually dramatic, but far the greater welfare and efficiency interest relates to the chronic form of the disorder.

Among the industries with which there is greater danger of chronic poisoning are the operation and repair of automobiles, rolling mills, blast furnaces, all other furnaces, the gas industry, traffic policemen and the heating industries. Of course, cooks, housewives, school teachers and school children are also in danger at times, though they are not usually considered as parts of any industry.

The symptoms which should cause an exposed person to suspect chronic monoxide poisoning are headaches, dizziness, irritability, mental depression, faintness, insomnia and cough. If several of these are present and chronic monoxide poisoning is suspected, a thorough examination should be made. This examination may show anemia, rapid pulse and breathing rate, nervous and emotional instability and irritable heart or organic heart disease.

Dr. May Mayers, who is devoting her time to the hazards of gas poisoning in industry, has some very definite advice for employers and employes in these industries. First, all parties should recognize the hazards and govern themselves accordingly. The most important point for the plant physician to watch when a person exposed to carbon monoxide is under observation is the richness of the blood.

If this is falling steadily and is nearing the danger line the worker should be shifted to a job where there is no exposure. After a while he can be returned to his old job often with permanent safety. By watching the blood regularly and shifting the work as a measure of prevention, it is often possible to build up a considerable degree of immunity. If the employer and his superintendent and employes are informed and interested, they can carry out such precautions as ventilation procedures, permitting no leaks in apparatus, not allowing fumes to discharge as will serve to convert a dangerous place into a safe one.

An unusual point made by Dr. Mayers is that workers be trained to remain calm, cool and quiet and not to indulge in lost motion. A nervous worker might be hard to train, she says, but it can be done. The placid, quiet worker is in much less danger of gas poisoning.

All employes should know the symptoms of chronic monoxide poisoning and their significance and all plant physicians should be trained in testing the blood. There should always be periodic physical examinations.

FOOD VALUE OF RAW EGGS.

M. R. M. writes: Is there any food value in raw eggs, and if so what? Would one a day be harmful in any way?

REPLY.

Eggs are wholesome and very nutritious. They are rich in proteins and high in calories. The yellows contain vitamins and iron and other minerals. Raw eggs are not quite as wholesome as cooked eggs, and they are not quite so easily digested. We sometimes find a person who is sensitized to eggs and has nettlerash, migrane or other trouble when he eats them.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

BONNY HEATHER.

HEATHER was very popular this last Christmas, all the florists had at least some heather, most of it unusually fine.

It has much to recommend it. First, it comes from Scotland and is surrounded with much of the folklore of the Scots. The heather that decorates the Scottish hills commemorates in its name the efforts of the Christians to convert the Picts. When the latter were visited by armed missionaries who ordered them to cease the worship of false gods, the Picts gave battle, and the plants that were bedewed by the blood of the heathen became the heathen, or "heather" for short.

Then, aside from the romance which surrounds it, its quaintness makes an appeal to any one seeking a plant that is a bit unusual. As a third asset, it is easily cared for, which makes it practical for house use.

Heather will do well in an eastern or northern window. It requires water whenever the surface of the soil in the pot is dry. Always keep the surface soil in the pot quite loose.

When the spring comes and you plant your heather in the open, prepare the soil carefully, adding plenty of leafmold and humus. Most growers use little manure with heather, and many believe that it should never be used. During the coldest months of the year mulch the plants with a light covering of leaves. Plants in the open should also be top-dressed once or twice a season with equal parts of soil, sand and peat moss. In the house a plant of heather will remain in bloom from Christmas until Easter, and in the open from July 1 until September.

Heather has one known enemy which must be controlled. This is the red spider, an insect, which, in th case of heather, can only be controlled by a weekly spraying with some nicotine preparation or any other insecticide your seedsman may recommend.

When old plants begin to show signs of growth, they must be trimmed back rather severely. Unless this is done, they will become too tall. Also, the sides must be trimmed so that the air can circulate freely.

Jane Interprets the Mode

Modern costumes for active sports must not have the slightest hint of autrefois. (Sketched on the Rue de la Paix).

New York, Feb. 16.

HOW about a lotta little notes today? I always like these scraps and gadgets from Mam'selle's Fashion Notebook.

Well, Chanel, for instance, shows gold metal belts matched with gold metal necklaces, on woolen dresses. And people like 'em.

'N' mam'selle saw a frock at the Paris Ritz showing Irish crochet sleeves, long and tight, which came from the short three-inch-long shoulder sleeves of the black dress.

Worth is using shirred velvet belts in pastel shades on robes d'interieur of wool shantung.

The tunic frock, with a lighter colored, three-quarter tunic over a black or brown skirt, is ideal for the tall woman. Petite madame must avoid it.

* * * *

Time to cut a wee inch-long slit in each of your sofa cushions and drop sachet powder into them before sewing back up again Orris root into others and lavender into the rest. Doesn't take a minute—and how delightful it is to relax back onto sofa cushions with faint and assorted scents in them.

Men like it, too—especially the lavender and orris root.

* * * *

Beauty Sorceress.

And the beauty sorceress, who knows all, sees all, just sent me a wire note from her tower, borne in the bill of a snow white dove, saying to remind you that orris root, which you buy for a dime in any drug store, is one of the best dry shampoos—and that you should have one dry shampoo between every wet one.

"Le golf roi des sports," which no one can deny, and for which the couturiers continue to design costumes which are essentially chic and practical. The only difference between today's golf togs and yesterday's is that the former is worn actually for golf, whereas the latter is to be worn for golf and everything else outdoors.

I illustrated two golf costumes for you today, to show you what the costumes for the king of sports continue to look like, and to warn you against fuss and feathers and the slightest hint of autrefois in this item of your wardrobe.

Au revoir!

Culbertson on Contract

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

TWO BLUFFS THAT WORKED.

I DO NOT believe in the bluff bids which parade under the name of "psychic." I do not use them except in counterattack against players who habitually resort to these tactics, for I have found in actual play that it is easier to bluff a player who is in the habit of bluffing himself, than it is one who values his hand correctly and draws accurate inferences from the bids made by his partner.

However, in my recent match with Mr. Sidney S. Lenz and Mr. Oswald Jacoby, two bluff or psychic bids followed each other on succeeding hands and both worked.

Neither side was vulnerable when Mr. Lenz dealt this hand:

Mr. Lenz
♠ K 8 7 5 4
◇ 9 7 3 2
♣ A 8 3

Mr. Culbertson
♠ J 6 3 2

Mr. Lightner

Mr. Jacoby
♠ Q
♡ Q 9 6 3 2
♣ K 10 6 4 2

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♡ (1)	Dbl.
1♠	1NT	2♣ (2)	2◇ (3)
Pass	Pass (4)	Pass

1—A bluff bid, pure and simple. The hand contains little more than 1 honor-trick

2—Continuing the bluff.

3—I thought my partner could now read Mr. Jacoby's bidding as bluffing and I wanted to keep the bidding as low as possible.

4—Mr. Lightner, usually adept at reading this type of bidding, fell into the trap.

I had an opportunity to recover lost ground on the very next hand which with its bidding was:

Mr. Lenz
♠ 8 7 4 2
◇ A J 3
♣ A 2

Mr. Culbertson
♠ J 9
◇ Q 9 8 7 6 5 2

♣ 9 7 5 3

Mr. Jacoby
♠ A Q 10 6 5 3

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1♠	1NT (1)	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	2◇ (2)	4♠
Pass	Pass (3)	Pass

1—This bid has as its basis an escape suit, a necessary condition to the making of a psychic bid.

2—Of course, playing the hand in no-trump doubled is unthinkable. The loss at two diamonds doubled would be negligible.

3—Mr. Jacoby's pass of the four spade bid can only be explained on the ground that he had fallen into a psychic trap.

A diamond was opened and Mr. Jacoby took all 13 tricks, as in fact, he would have done against any Opening.

TODAY'S POINTER.

The most effectivet way in which to use psychic bids is against those addicted to them, but always when the hand contains a safe escape.

THE HOMEMAKER

By NANCY CAREY

Plans for Week-End and Requested Recipes.

NOW comes Friday with its necessity of week-end planning. Another week has sped upon its way, spring is one week nearer, and I am sure none of us feels cause for regret. But such thoughts go but a scant distance toward the completion of the week's work, and so we must be about our business.

Nancy Carey.

SUNDAY'S DINNER.
Sauerkraut Cocktail
Olives Celery
Roast of Fresh Pork
Sweet Potatoes with Pineapple
Broccoli with Hollandaise
Apple Pie
Cheese
Coffee

SATURDAY'S SUPPER.
Braised Frankfurters
Baked Beans
Stewed Tomatoes
Rye Bread
Apricot Whip
Tea or Coffee

Boston Baked Beans.

2 cupfuls California pea beans
1 tablespoonful salt
1 pound salt pork, cut in two pieces
1 cupful molasses
½ teaspoonful dry mustard

Soak beans overnight in cold water. Drain well and cook in fresh water, to which the salt has been added, for about two hours. Put one piece of the salt pork in bottom of bean pot, add the beans and place second piece of pork on top. Add the molasses and mustard to the water in which the beans were boiled and pour it over all, reserving enough of the liquid for two bastings during baking. Bake for eight hours in a moderate (350 degrees) oven.

Macaroon Pudding.
(For Viola M.)

1 pint hot milk
4 eggs, separated
2 tablespoonfuls of maraschino juice or ½ cupful fruit juice
1 cupful sugar
12 macaroons
2 tablespoonfuls gelatin, granulated
1 cupful cold water

Soak the gelatin in cold water for about five minutes. Also moisten the macaroons in the fruit juice. After the gelatin has soaked, add the hot milk and stir until dissolved. Pour into a double boiler onto the yolks of the eggs, which have been beaten light with the sugar. Stir continuously while cooking until smooth and thick. Allow to cool and fold in the egg whites, beaten stiff, and pour into a mold which has been dipped in cold water and lined with macaroons. Set in icebox to harden and chill. Serve with whipped cream slightly sweetened.

Tomatoes Stuffed With Sweetbreads.
(For Mrs. S. L. Loehner.)

6 tomatoes
1 cupful sweetbreads
3 tablespoonfuls lemon juice
1 stalk celery, chopped
½ cupful mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Place sweetbreads in saucepan, add salt, sugar and lemon juice. Cover with water and parboil fifteen minutes. Set aside to cool and then remove all membranes. Chop very fine and add the chopped celery. Mix with the mayonnaise. Scoop out centers of tomatoes and fill with the mixture. Place in refrigerator and serve very cold.

Salad a la Sherry.
(For Mrs. Victor H.)

8 green peppers
4 red peppers, small
1-3 cupful vinegar
½ cupful olive oil
½ Bermuda onion
1 teaspoonful salt
½ teaspoonful powdered sugar
Chopped parsley.

Chop onion very fine and add twice as much chopped parsley as onion. Chop peppers and mix all together. Let stand in covered glass dish for one hour. Mix thoroughly and serve cold on crisp yellow lettuce leaves.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 8:20 to 10 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 5 p. m. to 6:16 p. m.

The influence in force February 19 are not of the best nature, and they will tend to make you do that which you should not and to neglect that which you should do. A feeling of discontent with existing conditions may cause you to momentarily lose your head—unhealthful influences for young people.

The child born on this February 19 will soon show that it possesses both brain and character. It will rather suppress its emotions, but will not be lacking in sincere affections. It will be bubbling over with animal spirits, and will need an active life. Legitimate outlets should be supplied for its superabundance of mental and physical energy.

Born on February 19, you are one of the world's "doubting Thomases" or "Jonahs." The silver lining of every cloud is not enough for you; you must see the sun shining through before you feel confidence. You are neither a mental nor physical coward about the actualities of life, but you are often downed by your imaginary worries. In struggles which mean patience, suffering and self-denial, you display real grit and determination. If your "still small voice" would tell you that everything would come out right instead of filling you with haunting fears, you would find life more productive in every respect. You never do things impulsively, and you are inclined to maul over the "pros" and "cons" to the point of confusion before you can come to any decision about most things. It is difficult for you to feel "sure" and perfectly satisfied in your mind about your decisions after they have been made. Your post-mortems maye be enlightening, but they do not bring back the dead past, and they seldom give you any comfort.

You are fitted for callings which are primarily intellectual, such as teaching, publishing or office work. You lack the necessary confidence and "nerve" for sales work. You are musical, and will at least appreciate the best that is produced in this art.

Successful people born February 19:

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

HER FUTURE!

DEAR Frances McDonald: I have read your column many times and have always wanted to write you, and at last I got up courage to write. I hope my problem doesn't sound too foolish to print.

Well, here it is: I am a young girl, 18 years old, and a senior in high school. I am deeply in love with a young man who has a good education, but is not working just now because work is so slack. My folks have known this fellow and know his father (his mother isn't living), but they dislike him and don't allow me to go with him very often.

I have cared for him for over two years now and he says he cares for me.

I have him come and spend the evening with me, but my mother talks so about him and acts so funny toward him I don't ask him to come very often. She has told him she doesn't want me to go with him, but he calls me up and comes to the house just the same. Do you think he cares for me? I am not allowed to go to his home at all. I don't think this is fair, do you? It is going to break my heart to give up this fellow.

I have tried to forget him, but I can not. Do you think I should pay no attention to him?

He says he is going to work in the city and then we will be happy. It would break my mother's heart if I should marry this fellow, but I must think of my future, and don't you think my mother should, too?

Would you give him up if you were me? I love him and would hate to be without him. HONEY.

An 18-year-old girl in high school defying and worrying her parents over a nice jobless young man is like a 9-month-old baby crying for the pepper shaker. Nothing can come of it but plenty of grief! To give the baby the pepper would be out of the question, and yet the baby would probably suffer lots less from the pepper than the high school miss from acquisition of her nice young man. Trouble is that what we like and admire at 18 looks so very different when we are, say, 25. And if by that time the thing we bawled for happens to be papa to our four or five hopefuls, it is just about too bad. But what about it?

Every year thousands of young women seek freedom from marriage bonds that were all they asked for at 18! You see, 18 wants action—and lots of it. And somehow marriage suggests to the 18-year-old mind the utmost in excitement. Especially if there can be mixed up with it parental objection, general unfitness on the part of the Romeo, or some other story-book complication to lend color to the event.

And so we have Mary Ann sneaking off with Sam Whosis, whose father is the town bootlegger, and feeling like the heroine in a movie. But in about five years Mary Ann is pretty well convinced of what she suspected two days after the marriage—that Sam is all her folks said he was and plenty more. She knows that the slouch her dad used to rave about is not just careless grace, as she supposed, but good, old-fashioned shiftlessness showing itself. In a word, she knows that her folks were 100 per cent right when they said Sam was no account and never would be. And it is up to Mary to decide whether she wants to go on being Mrs. Sam Slouch or get herself a divorce, which costs money and means she must go out and earn it. Is it not just too sad, when it could all have been avoided by the simple expedient of taking time to look around and shop in the best shops before picking such an all-important accessory as a husband? Why a husband at 18 anyway? Why New England boiled dinner for baby?

Eighteen has its joys. But marriage is not one of them. Learning about men is 18's job—not picking one man forever from the mere handful one has met at 18. We take a week to pick a hat. Why can not other women be equally fussy about getting just the right husband? If 18 could only know how many perfectly thrilling men there really are, it would be a big help to parents. That's what we think about it, Honey, and probably because we had such a narrow escape ourself when we were 18! Hold everything! Your "future," as you call it, will catch up with you soon enough, if not sooner. See America first!

Fifth Avenue Fashions

SMART JACKET SUIT.

Yes! There is always something sportive about a jacket suit. And as Paris is favoring this jacket type more than anything else for spring, of course you can't be without it.

And why not—it's so thoroughly youthful, flattering and a practical mode besides.

Choose a sheer novelty or monotone diagonal woolen in deep blue, a new bright green or rose-red for the skirt and jacket. The blouse may be of crepe satin, at or rough crepe silk in eggshell, white or a contrasting shade to tone with the woolen.

Style No. 384 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36 and 38 inches bust. Size 16 requires 4⅛ yards of 39-inch material for jacket and skirt with 1½ yards of 35-inch material for blouse.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Address Fashion Department, The Washington Post, Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, New York City.

KOTEX reduced in price

KOTEX reduces prices. Now, women who want the best, the most comfort-giving sanitary protection can easily afford it. And they are assured of the utmost protection to health . . . when they choose Kotex.

No question mark hovers over Kotex. No incessant doubt as to how it was made, where, under what conditions.

Kotex, you know, is cut, folded, even packed by machine. Made of tested materials. In air-washed rooms. Inspected 76 times during the course of manufacture.

The fact that hospitals used 24,000,000 Kotex pads last year is reason enough for selecting Kotex.

Kotex provides perfect comfort—downy softness; quick, protective absorbency. Wear it on either side with equal safety. Disposable, of course.

When buying it wrapped, make sure you get genuine Kotex.

ALEXANDRIA BLAZE PERILS 5 FIREMEN

Narrowly Miss Electrocution as Wire Falls During Warehouse Work.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Five members of Relief Truck Company, No. 1, of the Alexandria Fire Department, had a narrow escape from electrocution yesterday morning while fighting a fire which destroyed a brick warehouse at Prince and Union streets, when a high-tension wire, carrying 1,320 volts, fell across the truck when a pole was burned through. The wire just missed the men and burned a hole in one of the ladders. The men whose lives were endangered were Capt. Michael Sutton, Edward Cockrell, Arthur Skillman, Clarence Hellwege and George Dawson.

The building, which was owned by the estate of the late Richard Wattles, was destroyed, with its contents of fifteen tons of baled hay and straw, which was owned by the Baltimore Feed & Grain Co. The loss on the building, partly covered by insurance, is estimated at $2,000. The contents were not insured.

According to Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., the fire was evidently of incendiary origin.

Fireman Lester McMenamin suffered severe burns to his hands during the fire.

Bids have been submitted by 31 firms for the construction of the Ford Motor Co.'s new assembly plant at the foot of Franklin street, Alexandria, work on the foundation of which has already been started. The plant will be of steel frame, brick, granite and marble. Bids for the steel work have already been opened, but no awards have been made, and those for the general construction and for a water tower, water distribution plant and power house will, it is understood, be opened in Detroit on February 22.

Announcement of the contract awards is expected to be made before March 1. Piles are now being driven, the contract for this work having been awarded to the Merritt, Chapman & Scott Co.

The cost of the plant, in the construction of which several hundred men will be employed, is expected to be approximately $1,000,000, and it is expected the plant will be in operation in the late fall or early winter of this year.

The various committees in charge of plans for the Washington's Birthday parade to be held in Alexandria Monday have practically completed their labors.

The program for the placing of a wreath on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon Monday, on behalf of the George Washington Birthday Association, provides for the invocation by the Most Rev. A. J. Brennan, Bishop of the Catholic Church in Virginia; address by Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, U. S. A., grand marshal of the parade; prayer by Col. J. E. Yates, chief of chaplains of the United States Army; placing of the wreath by two Boy Scouts, and the benediction by Capt. Sydney K. Evans, chaplain, United States Navy. Many prominent Army and Navy officers will be in the party. The chairman of the committee in charge is Mark L. Price.

The officers of the Birthday Association are: William Albert Smoot, president; Martin E. Greene, secretary; J. William May, treasurer; Harry F. Kennedy, executive vice president; Charles C. Carlin, sr., Representative Howard W. Smith, Carroll Pierce, Dan S. Hollenga and Mark L. Price, vice presidents; Charles W. King, chief of staff.

The committee chairmen are: Advisory, H. D. Kirk; reception, Mayor Edmund F. Ticer; hospitality, Marshall L. King; automobiles, George W. Boyd; entertainment, O. Ashby Reardon; fraternal orders, John H. Trimyer; high school cadets, Col. Clarence Deems, jr.; military, F. Clinton Knight; National Guard, Capt. W. Cameron Roberts; naval, J. Herbert Taylor; press, Michael T. Dwyer; publicity, Francis H. Fannon; music, Roger C. Sullivan; public safety, Wallace Lawrence; police, Capt. John S. Arnold; finance, Henry F. Kennedy; transportation, Charles E. Dare; program, Charles C. Carlin, jr.; badges, John W. Brookfield, jr.; civic organizations, Elliott F. Hoffman; reviewing stand and decorations, Thomas Chauncey; veterans, Sidney Weil; public stands, Gilbert J. Cox, jr.; historian, Charles H. Callahan and librarian, Gen. Edgar Warfield.

Mrs. Martha Byrne, 75 years old, widow of John Byrne, died Wednesday at her home, 209 Wilkes street, Alexandria. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. H. Byrne, of Washington; two grandsons, E. V. and H. A. Byrne, of Washington, and a granddaughter, Mrs. H. A. Johnson, of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Cunningham funeral home at 2 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. Dr. William B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, and interment will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Lyon Village Citizens Attend Hearing Tonight

Determined to oppose any move on the part of Frank Lyon, developer of Lyon Village, Arlington County, to have the county board approve the rezoning of a section of Courthouse road, citizens of the village will attend a public hearing at the courthouse tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

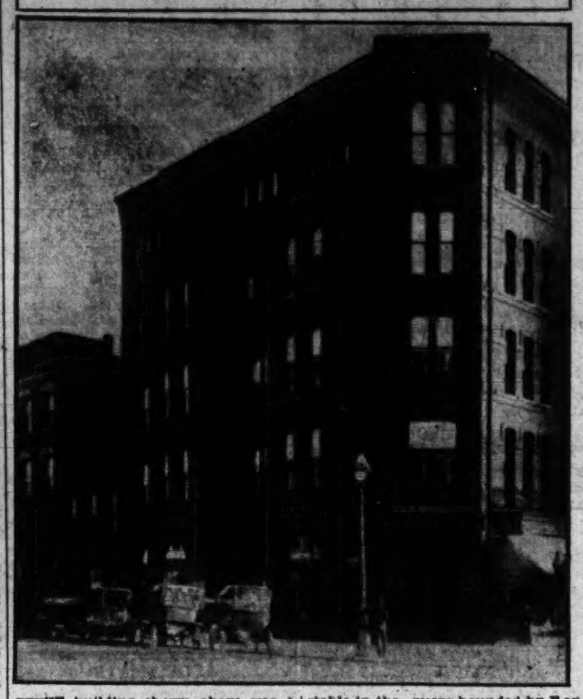
As stated by representatives of the Lyon Village Citizens Association, which is leading the fight, they are not opposed to erection of homes in the section sought to be rezoned providing the homes are in keeping with surrounding property.

Truckload of Tires Stolen From Garage

Forcing a back window to gain admittance robbers yesterday morning entered White's Garage, at Norbeck, and stole a truckload of automobile tires valued at $367. The front door proved too well built for their efforts so they moved to the back window which opened.

Detective Theodore Voliten, of the Identification Bureau of Montgomery County Police, made a detailed survey of the situation but was unable to find any fingerprints, the robbers having worn gloves. Police were left without clues.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 199



THE building shown above was a familiar landmark on the southeast corner of Fourteenth and G streets northwest for 38 years, and was torn down in 1924 to make way for the present structure.

This building was erected in 1886 by J. H. Small, the florist, and was occupied in 1913 by the Federal National Bank when that institution was organized. The name was later changed to the Federal-American Bank and the present building was built by that company in 1924.

Before this structure was built by Small, the site was occupied by a building that was originally built by John Adams in 1800 for the White House stables, and at that time there were only five houses besides the stable in the square bounded by F and G streets, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. In 1821, President Monroe permitted the stable to be used as a school, probably one of the first public schools in the city, and it was used as such until about 1870, when it was sold to a Mr. Douglass, at a price of $5,000.

When Small bought the property it was being used by Notley Anderson as a carpenter shop, and it had been practically torn to pieces by former pupils of the school hunting for souvenirs of their younger days.

The above building was erected at a cost of $42,000, and the upper floors were leased to the telephone company for a term of twenty years, and for a long time was used as an exchange.

Auto-Bicycle Crash Death Inquest Is Set

An inquest will be held February 27, into the death of Francis Detsch, of Hillmeade, Md., who died several days after being struck by an automobile on Defense highway. Magistrate Louis Gundling will impanel the coroner's jury, and the case is being investigated by Constable William Kreitzer, of Bowie.

According to Kreitzer, Detsch was riding a bicycle when in a collision with a car driven by Jesse Brady, of Bowie. Brady has not been arrested. Detsch was brought to Casualty Hospital by the Glenn Dale rescue squad. He received a fractured skull, broken back, and multiple lacerations.

TEA HOUSE HOLDUP MISSIVE DOUBTED

Notes Left by Suicide Say "I Led Gang" in Robbery at Bladensburg.

Clever H. Coleman, who killed himself in Atlantic City after writing a note confessing that he was the leader of the gang which held up a Bladensburg, Md., tea house last fall, was not one of the holdup men, Prince Georges County authorities believe.

Names of the leaders of the bandits are known, and none of them has used Coleman as an alias. Several of the minor members are not so well known to police, however, and it is possible that Coleman was present at the holdup. For this reason Detectives William Feehley and Cornelius Roche, of Baltimore, have been asked to investigate Coleman's death note.

Peter Abbott and William Hancock, held in Marlboro Jail in connection with the holdup in which Grover Amick was killed, denied yesterday that they knew anyone named Coleman. The dead man, who was 37 years old, was a Syrian. Until about a month ago he lived at 107 Seventh street southeast.

Coleman's body was found in a room in an Atlantic City hotel. Near him were three notes, two bearing no address, and the third directed to Miss Nora Winkler, a teacher at a college at Bridgewater, Va. Miss Winkler said she had met Coleman about a year ago, and that he had told her he was a lieutenant in a cavalry regiment stationed at Fort Myer.

One of the notes said:

"Release the Tea House murder suspects. They are not guilty. I was the leader of the gang." Another said, "It was just as well I shoot myself for I don't know how soon the gang will get me."

The note addressed to Miss Winkler said:

"Dearest—My happiest moments were spent with you. The gang knew I was going to Chicago and planned to kill me there." The woman said Coleman had never said anything to her about being connected with a gang.

Coleman left the Seventh street address about a week after the Tea House shooting on November 23. He returned to the house about the middle of January and stayed there a week. He is said to have friends in Baltimore. According to Army records a Clever Coleman was a private in a Fort Myer regiment, but bought his way out of the service several months ago.

Six Freed in Raid On Alleged Gaming

Trial of Capitol Heights Councilman on Drunk Charge Delayed.

The trial of Wallace Rollins, Capitol Heights, Md., town councilman, on charges of driving while drunk was continued yesterday until next Thursday at the request of Thomas J. Luckett, his attorney. Rollins, whose car is alleged to have struck Margaret Plumley while she was skating, was scheduled to have been tried in Capitol Heights yesterday before Judge J. Chew Sheriff.

Six men who were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct after a raid on an alleged gambling house in Capitol Heights were dismissed when they pleaded not guilty, but six more, who did not appear to stand trial, forfeited their collateral of $5. The disorder charged against the men was that they were in a house where gambling was permitted. No arrests for permitting gambling were made, however.

Upton Crosby, of Brooke's Station, was freed on charges of possession of liquor when it was shown he had three ounces of whisky less than the amount permitted by law.

Josiah Jones Reelected Head of Farm Bureau

Josiah W. Jones, of Olney, was re-elected president at the organization meeting of the board of directors of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau in the county agent's office in the Rockville, Md., Courthouse. Other officers elected were Windsor W. Hodges, of Boyd, vice president; George C. Fry, of Rockville, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Katherine Benson, of Rockville, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Invitations have been sent out for a meeting at the courthouse Tuesday at which participation in the livestock cooperative marketing association of the Federal Farm Board will be discussed. The meeting will begin at 1 o'clock.

"Positive Week" Urged By Arlington Chamber

In a letter sent out yesterday by the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, the citizens of the county are asked to observe the week of February 21 as "Positive Week."

The movement was advocated by Dr. Samuel M. Johnson, president of the National Boulevard Association, in a letter received from him by the organization.

THE PEON DRIVER?

"That the average cost of operating a cab, all proper expense items included, is approximately ten cents per mile, and that approximately forty per cent of the mileage is not revenue producing."

P. A. DEMPSEY RITES SET FOR TOMORROW

Former Sculling Coach Here Will Be Buried in Abbey Mausoleum.

One of the Capital's famous river men, Patrick A. Dempsey, who was one time rated as one of the Nation's leading scullers and crew coaches, will be buried tomorrow morning in Abbey Mausoleum, Arlington, after a requiem mass at 9:15 in the Church of the Holy Trinity.

Mr. Dempsey, who died Tuesday at the home of J. M. Farley, in Clarendon, Va., was born in Ireland, but came to this country as a youth. In 1908 he coached the only Georgetown University crew that made a bid for national rowing honors.

His crew finished second to Cornell at the Poughkeepsie regatta in that year. Cornell setting a new world record for the course to beat the Georgetown crew. In 1907 he coached the Vesper crew, from Philadelphia, which won the Henley regatta in England as the representative of this country.

After he came to Washington he established the boat house at 3600 K street, which he operated for many years. He at one time coached the Potomac Boat Club crew. Among those he coached were Granville Gude, Bob Duncan, Ed Easley, all of whom were well known in the rowing field.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Smith, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Emily Lingg, of Philadelphia, Pa.; three sons, George, Raymond and Edward, of Chester, Pa., and a brother, Joseph, of Philadelphia.

THOMAS O'CONNOR FUNERAL

Services Will Be Held Tomorrow at His Late Residence.

Funeral services for Thomas O'Connor, who died yesterday at his home, 709 Third street northeast, will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30, thence to St. Aloysius Church, where a requiem mass will be sung at 9. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. O'Connor was born in Ireland 67 years ago and has been a resident of this city for 50 years. He was employed as a car inspector for the Washington Terminal Co. for 45 years. He was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nora O'Connor; two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Reese and Miss Catherine R. O'Connor, and two sons, Thomas and Bennis T. O'Connor, all of this city.

CHARLES H. BURKE RITES.

Services Will Be Conducted Tomorrow at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Funeral services for Charles H. Burke, who died after an extended illness of four years, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, followed by interment at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Burke was born in Shenandoah, Va., and has been a resident of this city for the past 45 years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary L. Burke; three daughters, Mrs. Alice Conners, Mrs. Edith Tucker and Mrs. Louise Follia and two sons, Charles H. and James F. Burke.

Mapes Bills Hit By Business Men

Federation Indorses Flag Plan for Bicentennial Celebration.

Opposition to the Mapes tax bills was expressed last night at a meeting of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, held in the board room of the District Building.

The association indorsed a resolution to comply with Dr. George C. Havenner's request for display of United States and the Bicentennial flags in front of homes and business houses during the Bicentennial, and for residents of the District to park their cars in garages and back yards during that period. The association also opposed the sale of gasoline on the streets by the owners of individual trucks.

The following were designated to committees: Law and legislation committee, J. Nelson Anderson, general counselor of the association, chairman; Theodore Saks and Milton R. Vollmer. Public utilities committee, Edward H. Young, Theodore Saks and Hubert Newsom. Membership committee, R. W. McCullough, Arthur Smith, president of the association, and Eugene Minoux.

Children Applaud Symphony Concert

Hundreds Attend Program at Central High School; Miss Gordon Soloist.

Hundreds of boys and girls attended the children's concert of the National Symphony Orchestra at the Central High School auditorium yesterday, when Miss Dorothy Gordon was the soloist.

Conductor Hans Kindler delighted his youthful audience with his demonstrations of percussion instruments, while Miss Gordon's folk songs were greatly enjoyed.

The concert was concluded by two seventeenth century Dutch tunes arranged by Hans Kindler which showed the orchestra off to good advantage and brought an ovation to the musicians.

FAMOUS SEER

THE MAN WHO KNOWS

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been, just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry, whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travels, lost or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power. Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

PURCHASE of the screen rights to "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and the signing of its star, Katharine Cornell, to appear in a talking picture version, was announced yesterday by Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists. The film, to be made after the play closes its present road tour, will mark Miss Cornell's debut in the celluloids.

This rather definitely puts at rest the persistent reports that Miss Cornell was not to be tempted by the cinema. She has, to be sure, heretofore steadfastly held out against the most enticing offers that could be proffered her by those high in command of the motion picture industry. The fact that she has at last capitulated would seem to indicate terms of a most advantageous nature, although they are not even hinted at, let alone disclosed, in the first wire reports of the contract with U. A.

Miss Cornell only recently closed the New York run of "The Barretts" at the Empire Theater, after 46 weeks of capacity business, and with no diminution of interest discernible in the standing room patronage that kept receipts way above the contract control figure designed to signalize the closing of the Broadway run.

It is the natural assumption that Miss Cornell will be directed before the cameras and microphones by her husband, Guthrie McClintic, who already has several successful directorial jobs to his credit.

One of the few Sunday midnight performances ever given in a motion picture theater in Washington—if any ever have been—will be staged this Sunday night, February 21, or rather Monday morning, at 12:01 a. m., when a special Bicentennial revel will be presented at the Earle Theater. The principal screen attraction will be "Fireman, Save My Child," starring Joe E. Brown." Four acts of vaudeville will be headed by Toto, the world-famous clown. Also on the screen will be the Warner Brothers' Bicentennial special, "Washington, the Man and the City."

A uniform admission of 60 cents to all parts of the house will be charged.

And that reminds me. "Murders in the Rue Morgue," the film rendition of the blood-chilling Edgar Allan Poe story of homicide and horror, in which Sidney Fox and Bela Lugosi have the pivotal roles, and which opens today at the Rialto, will be additionally presented at a special midnight spook show tonight at 11:15 o'clock—thus spanning what Augustus Thomas was wont to refer to as the "witching hour," the ideal time for acquiring gooseflesh and graying the hair!

The cast that will participate in the orchestral prologue, "Visions of Washington," to be presented at the Fox for the week beginning today, having been completely costumed this week and dress rehearsals held, pleasure seekers may be assured of an unusual Bicentennial feature at the F street cathedral.

Among the 100 per cent local cast is Bert Bagranoff, former George Washington University football star and now soloist at the Church of the Epiphany, who will be heard in several duets with Miss Beverly O'Brien one of the four finalists in the Atwater Kent radio auditions held here recently. The solo dancer in the ballet numbers will be Miss Beverly Joyce.

The prologue opens with the Fox Orchestra, under the direction of Al Mitchell, in "An American Fantasy," followed by a duet by Miss O'Brien and Mr. Bagranoff, a minuet by the ballet, solo number by Miss Joyce and a grand finale by the entire cast and orchestra.

Eugene Spencer, who for the past several months has served as assistant manager of RKO-Keith's under Hardie Meakin, accompanied by Mrs. Spencer, left Washington last night to resume management of the RKO-Lincoln Theater in Trenton, N. J., now completely rebuilt and ready for formal dedication after having been destroyed by fire. Mr. Spencer has been a competent and agreeable executive with whom it is a pleasure to have been even remotely associated.

He will be succeeded in the assistant managership by L. J. Vanderburgh, who, in turn, will be succeeded as treasurer by Robert F. Hurley, formerly of the theater's service staff.

Speaking of RKO-Keith's, great store is being laid by Richard Dix's new vehicle, "The Lost Squadron," announced as the attraction to follow Constance Bennett in "Lady With a Past" next week.

In the cast supporting the star are Joel McCrea, Mary Astor, Erich von Stroheim, Robert Armstrong, Dorothy Jordan and Hugh Herbert. So sensational have been the "rushes" and previews of this thrilling tale of a squadron of army air pilots who weary of idleness and go in for movie stunt flying in a big way, that the Washington showing has been designated as the world premiere of the picture to gauge public reaction by a week's test run.

"The Lost Squadron" was written by Dick Grace, the most famous of all movie stunt aviators, who is currently running a series of adventure stories, based on his actual experience, in the Tabloid Magazine of The Sunday Post.

And that RKO sound truck is back in town again, too.

It was just about a year ago that this combination receiving and broadcasting motor truck, equipped with one of the most powerful loudspeakers ever made, began its transcontinental tour with Edgar Zane as pilot, chief mechanician and all-around general factotum. Since that time the truck has visited 42 States and traveled a total distance of more than 24,000 miles.

It has been assigned to the Washington RKO-Keith Theater for a period of a month to be of such service as it can in connection with the Bicentennial celebration, beginning Monday.

A few days ago Mr. Zane, accompanied by his charming young bride, were cruising about in the vicinity of Arlington and the NAA Broadcasting Station. Mr. Zane picked up the program, amplified it to top volume and tossed it back at the station through that loud-speaker, which, under favorable conditions, is audible for a distance of two miles, and almost knocked the boys apart from their microphones!

Imagine their embarrassment

Eddie Tierney, dance director, who has been playing vaudeville since his wife, Marjorie White, signed for one of the principal roles in "Hot-Cha!" the new Ziegfeld wham that is packing them in at the National, made a quick trip to Washington Wednesday to catch friend frau in the show.

He doesn't need me to tell him that what he saw was the platinum and peppy Marjorie at the very top of her form both in comedy and songs. It is she who scores the first real smash hit of the evening with "I Want Another Portion of That," sung with Bert Lahr.

Incidentally, I am assured that "Hot-Cha!" will carry the house attendance and money records away with it when it departs these shores Saturday night. The limit of standing room has been sold at every performance to date, with tonight and tomorrow sure sell-outs.

Say, by the way, how about that crack that the best things in life are free? At $4.40?

Remember, when you answer, that I've got a split lip!

NEW BAY FERRY LINE MEETS OPPOSITION

Claiborne Firm and State of Maryland Attack Proposal in Court Hearing.

(Associated Press.)

The opening of a ferry across Chesapeake Bay by the Chesapeake Beach Railway was opposed yesterday in the Supreme Court by the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Co. and the State of Maryland.

Philip B. Perlman, counsel for the Claiborne Ferry, contended the Chesapeake Beach Railway had obtained an invalid order from the Interstate Commerce Commission for the running of a ferry, insisting it had gone to the Federal commission to dodge the authority of the State of Maryland. Contending that substantially all the business of the proposed ferry would be the transportation of automobiles and persons in automobiles, he insisted no question of interstate commerce was involved and that the railway company should have applied to the Maryland Public Service Commission.

John Lord OBrien, assistant to the Attorney General, encountered opposition from the court when he asserted the Claiborne Co. had no right to maintain the suit. He argued that the Interstate Commerce Commission had jurisdiction over the Chesapeake Beach Railway, an interstate carrier, and that under the law it was necessary for the railway to go to the Federal commission before undertaking the expenses incident to putting on the ferry. The evidence before the commission warranted it, he asserted, in granting permission for the ferry. It was not a matter completely within the control of Maryland, he added, declaring the railway under the commission's order was free to establish a ferry, even though, as claimed by the Claiborne Co., its operations might reduce the earnings of the latter.

Maryland filed a brief in the case challenging the jurisdiction of the Federal commission and asserted it had exclusive jurisdiction in the matter.

Woodcock Urges Temperance Study.

Asheville, N. C., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Col. Amos W. Woodcock, director of prohibition enforcement, said today that the complete success of prohibition must come through a revival of temperance education.

43 PRISONERS GIVEN MARYLAND PARDONS

Six From Prince Georges, One From Montgomery Freed by Ritchie.

Six men from Prince Georges County and one from Montgomery have been pardoned by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie. A total of 43 prisoners from all parts of the State were freed by the pardons signed by the governor.

Marvin Riley, sentenced from Montgomery County for larceny, was freed because his family needs his support.

James D. Martin, sentenced from Prince Georges for helping a colored deputy sheriff in an attempted holdup, freed because of good conduct.

Thomas Allen, sentenced from Prince Georges for robbing a store, freed because he is only 16.

William C. Wilson, sentenced from Prince Georges for larceny of tobacco, freed because of good behavior.

Snowden H. Jones, sentenced from Prince Georges for larceny of tobacco, freed because he had no previous police record.

Woodrow Wilson, sentenced from Prince Georges for stealing an auto, freed because he was penniless and has a job promised.

Eugene Castle, sentenced from Prince Georges for larceny of toilet articles, freed because his employer asked for leniency.

U. S. BUILDING PLAN DEFENDED BY HEATH

Treasury Aid Tells Federal Architects Methods Are Best Available.

The present method of handling the Government's construction problems through the supervising architects' office has been proven by experience, and any change in the law is certain to be regretted, Ferry K. Heath, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, told the Association of Federal Architects last night.

Mr. Heath, whose office has charge of public buildings, was the principal speaker at a dinner held at the Washington Hotel to celebrate the third year of the Government building program.

At this time of "fiscal distortion," he declared, when every proposed expenditures must be scrutinized and its necessity demonstrated, the money now being expended in the Federal construction program can be defended from any point of view.

The program, he asserted, not only provides a backlog to private building industries, practically at a standstill, but enables the Government to make available urgently needed space for its activities occupying leased quarters at enormous expense.

"It is also recognized that the dollar expended in this class of public works probably reaches more sections of the country and affords employment to a greater population than any other Government expenditure," he said.

"It is easily demonstrated that it is not cheaper to employ outside architects. We know what we are paying outside architects and we know what it is costing us to do exactly similar work, and we know that the Government is saving thousands of dollars in the present building program by conducting the present building program as we are doing it."

Among the honor guests were Brig. Gen. Louis H. Bash, chief of the construction division, office of the quartermaster general; Admiral A. L. Parsons, Navy chief of Bureau of Yards and Docks; Col. George E. Ijams, assistant administrator, Veterans' Administration; Frank C. Baldwin, secretary American Institute of Architects; James A. Wetmore, acting supervising architect.

Officers Will Be Chosen By Prohibition Group

Election of officers to direct the work of the District Council, Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, for the next two years will take place this afternoon at the home of the secretary, Mrs. William B. Mason, 1738 M street, northwest. Officers are chosen biennially, in conformity with the national organization. Mrs. Henry Leonard is chairman of the nominating committee.

Present officers are: Miss Bell Gurnee, chairman; Congresswoman Mary T. Norton, Miss Elizabeth Harris, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. Alexander Wolf, vice chairmen; Mrs. William B Mason, secretary; Mrs. John F Dryden, treasurer.

Visiting Drivers Guilty Of 70 Miles an Hour

A speed case that for sheer speed probably eclipsed anything that has come to the attention of Police Court judges in some time came up yesterday when two out-of-town men were charged with exceeding 70 miles an hour within the District. Both were allowed to forfeit $25 collateral for the reason that there would be too much trouble in getting them back from New York for trial.

Policeman J. R. LeFoe arrested the pair on Bladensburg road northeast. They gave their names as Anthony Napolipan and Davis Rosston. They said they were from New York City.

Frank A. O'Neil Estate Is Placed at $195,844

An estate valued at $195,844.67 was left by Frank A. O'Neil, a real estate agent, when he died recently, it was shown yesterday in the District Supreme Court, when his brother, William J. O'Neil, filed a petition for probate of the will.

Mr. O'Neil owned personal property valued at $6,244.67, the remainder being real estate, which, according to the petition, is heavily encumbered by trusts. The mother of Mr. O'Neil is given a life interest in the estate and at her death the estate goes to the brother, who is also named as executor. Attorney Thomas G. Walsh represented Mr. O'Neil.

GANDHI HELD EAGER FOR DICTATORSHIP

Indian Woman Lawyer Analyzes Status for College Deans.

Mahatma Gandhi was attacked as a man "who has captured a political organization and turned it into a revolutionary party," while England was praised as a country that has opened the doors of opportunity in India, by Cornelia Sorabji, president of the Federation of University Women in Calcutta, in an address last night at the annual banquet of the National Association of the Deans of Women at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dressed in the colorful robes of her country, Miss Sorabji, who was the first woman lawyer to plead a case in an English court, declared that the majority of Indians are responding to the opportunity given them by England. The key to Gandhi's campaign in India is dictatorship, she asserted. "He is willing to sacrifice millions of people for the dictatorship," she said, "but there is no room in England for such a thing."

Miss Sorabji told the assemblage that England had been forced to deal with Gandhi and the other revolutionists in the same way that America has been forced to deal with its gunmen. She pictured hundreds of thousands of young boys and girls in the grip of Gandh"s "hypnotic influence."

The great problem of the future in India, Miss Sorabji said, lies in the fact that the leaders in India are minds of the twentieth century, while the masses are still living in the second century. "India is already being ruled by Indians," she said, "and the country is being equipped like a modern, civilized state." She declared that England is making a sincere effort to advance a program of progressive education in India.

Miss Sorabji's voice is that of a cultured Englishwoman. She is recognized as the leader of the feminist movement in her native country. She was introduced last night by Florence K. Root, president of the association.

Schuyler, Retired Army Officer, Dies

Succumbs on Coast at 81, After Varied Career in Service.

San Francisco, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Brig. Gen. Walter S. Schuyler, U. S. A., retired, died at the Letterman General Hospital at the Presidio here today. He lived in Carmel, Calif., and was 81 years old. He retired April 26, 1913.

The officer started as a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry June 15, 1870. He was promoted through the grades to brigadier general, which rank he was given on January 5, 1911. He was made a brevet captain on February 27, 1890, for his services in Indian campaigns in Arizona, Wyoming, Montana and Colorado.

He was professor of military science at Cornell University from 1883 to 1886 and again from 1896 to 1898. He served in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines from 1899 to 1902. He was a military observer with the Russian army in Manchuria in 1904; a member of the general staff, U. S. A., from 1904 to 1906 and in 1910. In 1909 and 1910 Gen. Schuyler was commander of the military district in Hawaii. He later held commands in Colorado and Texas.

Train Bucks Snow To Relieve Towns

Durango, Colo., Gets First Mail in Ten Days; Food Is Being Sent.

Durango, Colo., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The first train to arrive from Denver since February 8 reached here today after bucking snow blockades in Cumbres Pass, 10,000 feet up in the mountains. The train carried 2,000 sacks of mail.

Trains running today between Durango and Alamosa carried a large supply of food, hay and grain intended for northwest New Mexico, which faced a shortage of supplies because of the heavy snow which has stalled rail and highway traffic. The supplies will be left at Chama, N. Mex., whence they will be taken by sled and pack burros to Dulce and there distributed to several thousand persons whose winter stores are nearly exhausted.

Silverton, Colo., 51 miles west of Durango, sent a call for help today. Giant snow slides between Silverton and Durango blocked the railroad and highway, and residents feared their supplies would be exhausted before traffic could be restored.

Growing Wheat Demand Is Noted by Dominion

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—A growing demand for wheat by the importing nations of the world was noted tonight by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. A substantial increase in purchases, especially on the part of continental Europe, was recorded in the past month, it said in a report on the world wheat situation.

A wider interest of European countries in the wheat market is a logical development, the report continues, of a scarcity of domestic offerings, which has been followed by significant adjustments in the import regulations governing foreign wheat by both France and Italy. Russia has ceased to be a factor in the world situation, exports dropping sharply since November.

Escaped Prisoners Found at Sea.

Kupang, Dutch Timor, Malay Archipelago, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Nine escaped Portuguese prisoners, found drifting in a lifeboat at sea by the Australian schooner Jewasuny and turned over to a Dutch steamer, arrived here today. They were trying to escape from Dilly, a town on the Portuguese half of the Island of Timor.

Education Council To Convene Today

1,000 Delegates Expected to Attend Meeting of National Group.

The midwinter meeting of the National Council of Education, bringing about 1,000 delegates to Washington, will open today in the auditorium of the Interior Department, Nineteenth and F streets northwest. The meeting will continue through tomorrow.

The major part of the program will be devoted to a discussion of inhibiting factors in the freedom of individual speech and action in relation to present day social and economic problems.

Speakers today will include William A. Evans, president of the Cincinnati Schoolmasters Club; Dr. E. S. Evenden, associate director, National Survey of the Education of Teachers, and Dr. Leonard V. Koos, associate director of the National Survey committee on secondary education.

Ready readers await the offers in Post Classified Ads, the first thing in the morning.

Hawaiian Princess Is Critically Ill

Last of Famous Family Known Here as Wife of Island Delegate.

Honolulu, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Princess Kalanianaole, last of the line of the greatest Hawaiian family and widow of a former delegate to Congress, was so ill today that doctors held little hope of her recovery.

She is the last direct descendant of Kamehameha I, the chieftain whose brilliant reign in the eighteenth century marked the beginning of the transition from barbarism to civilization and drew the islands together as one kingdom.

The princess is known as Mrs. J. Frank Woods. Woods, a capitalist and rancher of the islands, is dead. The princess married him after the death of her first husband, ten years ago. With her husband, Prince Johan Kuhio Kalanianaole, she was well known in Washington, where he served as Hawaii's delegate to Congress from 1902 until his death 20 years later.

Since the world began and down through the ages—scientists, naturalists and the medical profession have sought to solve the secrets of these grim jests of nature. We may laugh at them—shudder at them—but we must never forget one thing—but for the grace of God we might be as they!

A Landmark in Screen Daring!

The inside story of the making of a picture that was debated for four years—the picture that is a challenge to the world!

At every story conference the question was brought up "Do we dare tell the real truth on the screen? Do we dare hold up the mirror to nature in all its grim reality? Do we dare produce FREAKS?"

WHAT ABOUT ABNORMAL PEOPLE?

THEY HAVE THEIR LIVES, TOO!

Hans, the 3-foot high dwarf, fell in love with this beautiful woman. But can a full-grown woman truly love a midget? Here is only one of the strange situations in this amazing picture—the most startling human story ever screened.

What about the Siamese twins—have they no right to love? The pinheads, the half-man half-woman, the dwarfs! They have the same passions, joys, sorrows, laughter as normal human beings. Is such a subject untouchable? While we hesitated, a great story, thoroughly planned, awaited the word to go ahead. Finally

ELMER TWITCHELL FOR GROUP-PRESIDENT PLAN.

DEAR Editor: With everybody arguing about which of all the candidates for the Presidency would make the best Chief Executive, it occurs to me the best solution of the whole problem is to do away with the old-fashioned system of having one President at a time in the White House and adopt the idea of putting in a group. In other words, choose a team of Presidents, certain ones to play under certain conditions.

• • • •

What I propose is that both major parties nominate a presidential team or squad. If the Republicans get the most votes their team will run the country for four years, and if the Democrats win the election their bunch will go in.

• • • •

For instance, suppose the Republicans put up a ticket of four Presidents: Hoover, Coolidge, Johnson and Borah. Now that would be a swell outfit. It would mean a good show, plenty of variety and a fine assortment of temperaments. To make one man serve as President for four years is all wrong anyhow. It's too much of a strain on any one man, and it isn't fair to the public. It's just poor sportsmanship, that's all. Can you imagine the baseball world making one pitcher stay in there and take it for four years the way we've been making Hoover take it? It's not human.

• • • •

Now with a presidential team we could take Hoover out for a few innings to rest up and stick in Cal Coolidge (if what the crowd wanted was steadiness) or call on Borah if the situation called for excitement. Of course, if we wanted a riot we could send Hi Johnson into the box. I figure Presidents are like baseball pitchers. There are hot-weather pitchers and cold-weather pitchers. No country that prides itself on its sportsmanship should tolerate one President pitching hot or cold, wet or dry, for four years without any relief.

• • • •

Suppose the Democrats won and put Smith, Roosevelt, Garner and Bill Murray in the White House? Now there would be a colorful outfit. They could use Roosevelt as long as he had anything on the ball and send in Garner for relief work if Roosevelt began to lose control. And when the situation called for fireworks they could use Smith and Murray.

• • • •

It's really not as crazy as it sounds. Is there anybody who doesn't think that four Presidents wouldn't be better than one? As a matter of fact, one of the four Presidents could do nothing but pose for the newsreel pictures.

• • • •

Anyhow, I claim it's a good idea and I want credit for being the original Four-Presidents-at-a-Time man. Anything you can do to help me put over the idea will be appreciated.

Yours truly,

ELMER TWITCHELL.

STILL GUESSING.

Said Roosevelt to Alfred Smith,
"I wish I knew whom you were with."
Said Alfred Smith to Frank Roosevelt,
"I'll have to keep that under my belt."

• • • •

THE NIGHTGOWN TEST.

The Boston Transcript thinks Mr. Garner would be a good Democratic choice for the Presidency because he has some of Calvin Coolidge's homespun traits. Now, if the Texan will make a public announcement that he sleeps in an old-fashioned nightgown, the nomination is his.

• • • •

Elmer Twitchell was nearly named on an antihoarding committee, but was caught digging a hole near a tree.

• • • •

One of the things that makes Mr. Garner a standout for the Presidency is that he has long been highly successful raising nuts.

• • • •

Lafe Hostetters, of Stony Creek, has responded to the Anti-Hoarding Drive like a true patriot by taking the three-ply cord off his bank roll and substituting a grade of string which can be broken with a real effort.

Second Public Health Talk Is Scheduled

The second in a series of Public Health Talks, given under the auspices of the Medical Society, for the benefit of the citizens of the community, will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Medical Society Building, 1718 M street, northwest. The speaker will be Dr. C. C. Little, director general of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

Dr. Little is an ex-president of the University of Maine and of the University of Michigan, and is at present director of the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory of Bar Harbor, Me. He is eminently qualified to discuss cancer, and especially in reference to the cooperation of the public in its early recognition and eradication.

STOCK PRICES RALLY ON FINANCIAL NEWS

Ruling Aimed at Shorts Cited With Bank Rate Cut as Market Stimulus.

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Bulls held the balance of power in today's stock market, giving prices a sharp afternoon fillip, which lifted representative leaders 1 to 5 points net. Turnover, however, was the smallest in a week, amounting to 1,682,115 shares.

Early heaviness of the rails, which sympathized with an 8-point break in Southern Pacific, and little noticeable effect elsewhere and utilities and industrials generally ranged above the previous close even at their lowest. This resistance doubtless encouraged resumption of the advance, with the result that most carrier stocks more than recovered their declines.

Perhaps the market anticipated a cut in the rediscount rate following the Bank of England's reduction, but there was no change here. About a month ago Wall street was confidently expecting a lower rate at the New York Reserve Bank, but there have since been substantial gold losses and the directors doubtless felt a change could wait until the credit expansion measure has become law.

Basis for Rally.

A more likely basis for the rally, however, was the wide circulation of reports before the close, later confirmed, that the stock exchange was taking steps to make stocks more difficult to borrow, thus tending to discourage short sales. Sharp gains by several issues plainly indicated hasty covering.

A few stocks which recently had been inconspicuous came to life. One was Gillette, up 2 points in anticipation of the dividend payment. Another was American Woolen preferred with a similar rise. International Harvester's dividend revision to a $1.80 annual basis from $2.50, had been so well discounted that the shares firmed on covering.

American Telephone swiftly made up most of what it had lost yesterday, advancing 5½ net. Southern Pacific reduced its break to 5⅛. U. S. Steel struck out for 50 but got only 49½ where it was 2½ higher. American Can, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Case, Westinghouse and Beechnut advanced 2 to 3. Tobaccos improved on reports that January cigarette production had been larger than estimated.

Banks' Changes Routine.

There were only routine changes in the Central Banking System's weekly statement which covered the mid-month settlement date. Much more interest was attached to the circulation figures, showing a drop of $17,000,000. The national assumption was that drives against hoarding had borne fruit, although some bankers had hoped for a larger decline.

Commission houses hailed the $13,000,000 rise in brokers' loans on the theory that this reflected, at long last, increased public participation in the market. Not since the week ended September 3 had borrowing increased; but it would have been indeed surprising had not the recently strong market brought an advance.

By lowering its discount rate to 5 per cent from the 6 per cent level imposed when Britain went off the gold standard, the Bank of England of course aids business in that country which has already taken important steps toward financial equilibrium. Bankers here pointed out that England had been able to fight her battles without currency inflation, and this factor probably figured in the rate decision, furthermore, the Franco-American credits have now been repaid. The bank gained some gold in the past week.

Stocks on Coast Climb Above Eastern Prices

San Francisco, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—A sudden wave of buying swept the stock markets here this afternoon, shooting many Wall street favorites far above their closing prices in Eastern markets.

Among the best gainers up $2 to $3 or more from Wall street closing prices, were United States Steel, American Telephone, Southern California Edison and duPont.

There was no news to explain the sudden spurt. Word from Washington that House committees had approved a measure for legalizing beer was hailed enthusiastically.

Some brokers advised clients the rise was in anticipation of an attempt to put the market to new highs on passage by the Senate of the Glass bill to liberalize bank loans, expected by some observers tomorrow.

Some of the closing prices, compared with the Wall street close, were: United States Steel, $52.87; up $3.37 from New York's finish.

American Telephone, $137.50; up $3.50.

Pacific Gas, $36.62; up $1.26

Standard Oil of California, $27.37; up $1.75.

Southern California Edison, $33; up $2.

DuPont, $60; up $2.

SHOLL'S CAFES PLAN TO OPEN 30 BRANCH

Four-Story Building on G Street Will Be Occupied Soon After April 1.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Because of increasing business, Sholl's Cafes will expand their organization by establishment of a third branch in the four-story brick and limestone business building at 1219-21 G street northwest, it was learned yesterday.

The building, which also has a selling basement and was formerly occupied by Parks' women's wear firm, will be entirely remodeled, and will be occupied after extensive improvements scheduled for completion by April 1.

The building, which has a frontage of 43 feet and a depth of 95 feet, is equipped with two electric passenger elevators. Details of the lease which was negotiated by the office of Carl G. Rosinski, realtor, have not yet been reported.

The Sholl organization is now operating branches at 1032 Connecticut avenue and 3027 Fourteenth street northwest. Don S. Johnson, with offices in the Colorado Building, will be the architect for the improvement work.

Life of Auto Tires.

How long should a motorist use an automobile tire before discarding it?

For the answer to this question, Chapin Hoskins, industrial editor of Forbes, national business biweekly magazine, goes to William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Co.

In the current issue of Forbes, Mr. Hoskins interviews President O'Neil.

"Unfortunately," Mr. O'Neil says, in answer to the question, "tire-makers spent millions educating the public to squeeze the last possible mile of use out of every tire. That was in the days when rubber was $1 a pound, cotton fabric 50 cents a pound, labor $1 an hour and tire prices a real consideration in car operating expense.

Now, with tire prices around and under $10, the last few thousand miles squeezed out of a tire may mean a saving of 50 cents in tire expenditure—and, besides reducing riding comfort, that same last few thousand miles on a worndown tire may actually cause car depreciation and mechanical trouble amounting into dollars instead of cents, to say nothing of the danger to life and limb caused by accidents that so often result from unsafe and worn-out tires."

New Customers Added.

Extension of electric lines and gas mains and the wiring and piping of old and new houses on existing lines added 29,150 new customers to the number served by the Associated Gas & Electric System, it is revealed in the 1931 report of the system's new business department.

Of these new customers, 23,711 use electricity, 5,439 gas. The total of system customers at November 30, 1931, was 1,443,706.

The House had before it yesterday Joint Resolution 292, which was reported Monday by the committee on agriculture, which would make available from the unexpended balance of drought relief appropriations to the Department of Agriculture $10,000,000 as a revolving fund to be loaned to help establish agricultural credit corporations, live stock loan companies or like organizations for increasing the capital stock of such corporations qualified to do business with the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.

Report of Committee.

The committee's report says: "In many instances the regular commercial banks are not in a position to furnish the proper credit facilities for the type of paper that is sought to be covered by the proposed bill.

Due to the long-term credit desired and to the fact that in some sections the banking facilities are inadequate for this type of credit, it is hoped that this measure will furnish a supplement to these facilities and will also enable the farmers and live stock men to have the necessary credit."

The American Chemical Society, with offices in the Mills Building, announced yesterday that formation of a national institute in the perfume and cosmetic industry is urged by the committee on research department of American Manufacturers of Toilet Articles in a survey to determine the more pressing technical problems of the industry reported in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

FRIDAY FEBRUARY 19, 1932 SPORTS

LEVINSKY OUTPOINTS DEMPSEY IN SLUGGING MATCH

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

COL. JAKE RUPPERT, WHO bought into the New York Yankees with his brewery millions and parlayed his holdings into six American League pennants, has been without a championship since 1928, and with envious eyes cast toward the St. Louis Cardinals, announces that the Yankees are going into the baseball farming business.

The husbanding of ball players by the farm system as exemplified by the Cardinals was at one time discouraged by Commissioner Landis as harmful to civic baseball spirit in the small minor league towns where control of the ball team was gradually being taken from the hands of the townsfolk by the big league clubs' branch offices, but the chirps from the commissioner in that regard have become weaker and weaker and in the absence of any recent announcements it is presumed that he now countenances the idea.

The Yankees are going into the farming system on a wholesale scale, expanding their holdings to eight clubs. At present they hold title only to the Newark team of the International League but working agreements are already in effect with the Cumberland Club of the Middle Atlantic League and Scranton of the New York-Pennsylvania circuit. The acquisition of one club in a Class A league, one in Class B, one in Class C and another in a Class A or AA league is expected to be announced soon.

The Cardinals, with farms in every class of league, have established an inexhaustible source of supply of ball players for the main office in St. Louis with Pepper Martin as the outstanding graduate of the system.

The advantages of the farm system are manifold, both to the daddy club in the big leagues, the minor league towns and the players themselves. The Cardinals have found an ideal way to graduate their rawest material into the proper niche and draw upon the players as they show the ability to advance. Rarely is there a Cardinal prospect who must be turned loose for want of a proper sphere to demonstrate his ability and the diamonds in the rough that have been unearthed have yielded valuable returns to the St. Louis owners.

An outstanding example of how the chain store system redounds to the benefit of the minor leagues is the situation at Columbus, in the American Association, owned by the Cardinals. The St. Louis Club at its annual meeting of stockholders decided to forego dividends and erect a $400,000 stadium for the Columbus Team. Imagine a minor league club owner digging down for that sum to build a stadium.

The Cardinals have figured in more trades than any other major league clubs simply because they have been able to pare off more surplus talent for material offered by other clubs in trading moods, thus fortifying their own weaknesses.

Another item that has proved extremely valuable to the Cardinals with their chain store system is the fact that the pay roll of the St. Louis major league club can be kept down to a minimum due to the absence of high-salaried performers.

Graduates of the Cardinals' minor league farms are too eager for a chance in the big show to demand large salaries, and when a player does reach the stage of a star, with a commensurate high salary, the Cards are able to trade him off in the knowledge that from their farms an able substitute will be available. Frankie Frisch, who drew $20,000 last year, is the highest-paid performer in the history of the club, and it was John McGraw, of the Giants, who pointed out to Bill Terry in his salary argument that Terry's $25,000 contract exceeded the combined salaries of both Hafey and Bottomley, of the Cards, who ranked fully as high in stardom and who were virtually tied with Terry last year in the three-cornered race for the National League batting championship.

Ruth Beaten in Final Of "St. Pete" Golf Play

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.). Babe Ruth found six straight one-putt greens by his opponent too much for him in the finals of the Snell Isle amateur golf tournament here today and was beaten by F. P. Cody, St. Petersburg, 4 and 3.

Ruth was one down at the turn and the six one-putt greens by Cody followed on the second nine. The match ended when Cody holed out for a birdie three at the 15th.

They played out the round, Ruth taking a 76 and Cody a 74.

Perkins-Tryon Triumph In Four-Ball Match

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.). T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur champion, and Howard Tryon, alert young Detroit golfer, blazed a scorching trail over Miami Biltmore Club course today to win, 11 and 9, their first match in the new international amateur four-ball championship.

Perkins and Tryon advanced to quarter-final play by defeating A. P. Lawton, Providence, R. I., and H. B. Money, Wilmington, Del.

Wake Forest Defeated by G. W. Five

Virginia Team Bows by 48-34 After Holding Lead.

G. W. Attack Spread Over Whole Team; Zahn Leads.

By JACK ESPEY.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S giant basketers, showing no ill effects of their first loss of the season to Duquesne last Monday, overpowered a hard-playing Wake Forest quintet, 48 to 34, last night in a furiously contested game before 600 persons on the H street court. It was the Colonials' tenth victory in eleven starts, and maintained their unbroken string of successes on their own floor.

Coach Pixie's goal snipers were not quite in their best form, especially in the second half, when their passing became ragged, but they showed the old zip and stamina which has carried them through to many a sensational win at breakneck speed this year. They were matched with respect to speed and lasting qualities, but the Deacons failed to equal them in passing; that is, passing of the surefire brand.

Bullet-Like Passes Win For Colonials.

Bullet-like passes to keen-eyed shooters under the hoop proved the deciding factor. Exactly ten of the Colonials' nineteen field goals resulted from these tosses, in which all hands took a part, while six other two-pointers came from close shots. Still the Colonials missed many tosses and overthrew others.

Wake Forest began auspiciously, securing a 4-0 lead in the first minute on goals from under by Pat Malloy, and held the lead until midway of the first period when Forrest Burgess fractured an 8-8 deadlock by sinking one of two free tosses. The rally that tied the score found Chambers, Parrack and Zahn whipping the cords for two-pointers.

With the entrance of Jack Conner, substituting for Chambers, George Washington's attack took on the aspects of a cyclone, the net result being a spurt that carried the Colonials safely out front, 23-13, before intermission.

Colonials Manage to Hold Their Lead.

Though Conner did not return for the second half, the home talent, led by Zahn, Parrack and Hertzler, managed to hold the advantage at all times. The visitors' total was increased mostly through individual effort rather than passing, several of their shots being made on follows-up.

Zahn topped G. W. in scoring, with 18 points, followed by Parrack, who scored 12.

Bruder Beats Simpson In Seton Hall Sprints

Newark, N. J., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Three times beating a crack field to the tape at 40, 50 and 60 yards, Bill Bruder, of the Newark Athletic Club, came to the fore for the first time during the present indoor track season by sweeping the sprint series tonight in the annual Seton Hall meet.

Three times the Newark star had the final "kick" necessary to hit the string ahead of George Simpson, former Ohio State University ace, now running for the Los Angeles Athletic Club. In the 40-yard event he beat Simpson by inches, at 50 yards he was 2 feet ahead of the Coast star, and at 60 yards he had a full yard to spare at the finish. Bruder's times for the three dashes were 5 seconds, 5 3-5 seconds and 6 2-5 seconds.

Ralph Sickel, of the University of Kansas, former Big Six Conference champion, could do no better than third in each of the three sprints, while Chet Bowman, of Newark A. C., finished fourth in three starts.

Rain Greets Giants On Arrival on Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Returning to Southern California for spring training after an absence of 25 years, the New York Giants were greeted by a downpour of rain today, which limited activities to the formality of checking out uniforms.

While the rain spoiled Coach Dave Bancroft's plans for a light workout at Wrigley Field, there was one ray of light. Herman Bell, who pitched the team to sixteen victories last season, met the squad and turned in his signed contract to Secretary James Tierney, who brought the first consignment into town.

Golf War in District Looms Over Amateur Trial Dates

Columbia Club May Reject Open Qualifying Round Due to Assignment of Amateur Tests to Chevy Chase.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE exclusive announcement in The Post yesterday morning that the sectional qualifying round for the national open golf championship had been scheduled for this city on Monday, June 6, by the United States Golf Association has precipitated a controversy regarding the club where the event shall be held.

The letter from the national association to D. L. Thomson, president of the District Golf Association, announcing the date and requesting him to make inquiry among the clubs in order to determine which club would be willing to stage the event, was received by him on Wednesday morning and was submitted to the meeting of the executive committee of the local organization on Wednesday night, whereupon he was appointed a committee of one to arrange the details.

As Robert Stead, jr., chairman of the golf committee of the Chevy Chase Club, intimated that it had already been arranged that his club would be assigned the qualification round for the national amateur championship, it was naturally decided that the Columbia Club should be asked to take the qualification for the national open, which is almost entirely a professional competition.

It developed yesterday, however, that many members of the Columbia Club are by no means satisfied with this situation. On the 18th of February, 1931, the secretary of the club, on motion adopted by the board of governors, advised the United States Golf Association that it would be glad to be assigned the qualification round for the national amateur championship of 1932 without any reference to the national open. Sentiment expressed among the Columbia members yesterday was to the effect that if the club could not obtain the amateur qualification round it would have nothing to do with the national open.

The trouble which has arisen might have been averted if the Columbia Club had been represented at the meeting Wednesday night.

President Clyde B. Asher last night stated that he could not take the responsibility of solving the problem and that the next meeting of the board of governors would not be held until the third Monday in March.

"If the Columbia Club does not want to stage the qualification round for the national open," said President Thomson, of the District Golf Association, last night, "formal notification to that effect will be sufficient.

TREANOR AND STRICKLER BATTLE

8-Round Bout Listed on Kocsis-Welsh Card Feb. 29.

BILLY STRICKLER, District of Columbia light-heavyweight, and one of the toughest battlers in local ranks, and Al Treanor, of Philadelphia, managed by Al Lippe, will appear in the first of the four eight-rounders of the all-star cards to be staged at Ritchie Coliseum on Monday night, February 29.

Matchmaker Frankie Mann made the announcement last night and promised the engagement would be a whirlwind, to be followed by two others in the making. The card will be topped off by the Southern bantam title battle between Antol Kocsis and Dick Welsh, of Norfolk.

Strickler made a gallant showing against Eric Lawson in the Day Nursery card some weeks back. He is a rugged scrapper, who comes on continually, no matter how hard the going. Billy earned a host of friends in his last showing and many fans left the ringside after the Lawson battle, believing Billy would have won had the fight been a fifteen-rounder.

Other Important Matches.

While these two engagements are main-eventers in most clubs, Matchmaker Mann will offer two others of greater importance, he declared, and will announce them later.

Aside from the two eight-rounders announced there will be one four-round opener. Mann is seeking two first - class local lads for the encounter.

Treanor is by no means unknown to Southern and Middle Atlantic fight fans. He has fought a draw with Bob Lawson, of Newport News, who decisioned Strickler three weeks ago, and has defeated Young Ketchell, Pat Haley, Jimmy Smith, Eddie Dempsey, Jack Palmer, Leo Duncan, Sylvan Bass and Joe Smallwood. Strickler has beaten Bass.

Announcement was made last night that the scale of prices would conform to the Day Nursery cards at Alexandria. Admission is $1.50, but there will be seats at $2.00, and ringside at $2.50.

Seats will be placed on sale at Spaldings, Vic's Sport Shop and at Goldie Ahearn's shop. Reservations can be made there at any time.

Walter Johnson Given A Good-By Dinner

Thomas F. Flaherty, one of Washington's most dyed-in-the-wool fans and a great friend and admirer of Walter Johnson, was host last night at the Hamilton Hotel at a good-by dinner in honor of the Nat manager, who leaves for the Biloxi training camp tomorrow. There were no speeches—just a "family" dinner to which were invited many of Johnson's best friends. Moving pictures of sports events followed the dinner.

Those invited were: Lawrence Richey, William M. Mooney, Clyde Kelly, John H. Bartlett, Fred Young, George Schneider, Hugh Kerwin, Joe Judge, Ossie Bluege, Frank L. Yates, Frank Bogardus, Leo E. George, Grey Walters, Walter R. McCallum, Edward B. Eynon, jr., Joseph Murphy, Leslie Johnson, Nat L. Goodman, John M. Torka, Eddie Johnson, Samuel Steinberger, Walter Johnson, jr., Robert Peake, Edward Talbert, J. G. Whiteside, Dick Moore, Nick Altrock, Frank H. Young, Alexander Armour, Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, James M. Mead and J. R. McCarl.

2 IN TIE FOR MEDAL AT TAMPA

MacFarlane and Dietz Top Qualifiers With 136's.

PALMA CEIA GOLF CLUB, Tampa, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., veteran, and Dick Metz, San Angelo, Tex., youngster, burned up the Palma Ceia golf course today to tie for medalist honors in the $4,000 Gasparilla open golf tournament with 36-hole scores of 136.

Metz's card showed 35—32—67 for the morning round and 32—37—69 for the afternoon. MacFarlane shot 33—34—67 in the afternoon to pull up a morning round of 33—36—69.

144 Scores Qualify for Match Play.

The youth and the veteran led 32 of the country's outstanding professionals into tomorrow's match play. It took 144—only four strokes over par for 36 holes—to get into the match class. Abe Espinosa, of New York, who shot 144, failed to qualify as he was eliminated by Tony Manero, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Ted Smith in a play-off for two places.

Many a good golfer fell by the wayside as a result of the terrific qualifying pace. One hundred and fifty-two started the first qualifying round, but a card of better than 74 was necessary to get into the second 18 holes as tournament officials limited by bracket to the 64 low scorers.

Match play will be over the 18-hole route, with the 36-hole final round on Sunday.

Augusta Course Mark Is Set by Bobby Jones

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones today set a new course record over the Augusta Country Club course when he turned in a 69 to clip one stroke from the previous record of 70 for the par 72 course.

Jones, playing with Charles McGee, of New York, defeated Fielding Wallace and William Wallace, of Augusta. A month ago Jones made a hole in one on the second hole of the course.

Following Jones and his foursome came Grantland Rice, veteran sports writer, playing with Bobby's father, Robert P. Jones, who won from Clifford Roberts and H. C. Strong, sr., of New York. Jones' card:

Mat Feature Landed by Grobmeier

Leg-Lock Ruination of Kirilenko in 39 Minutes.

2,000 Thrilled as Doc Wilson, Ernie Dusek End in Draw.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

UNCOILING a pair of legs as long as a couple of bread lines, Fred Grobmeier, the only hungry looking wrestler in captivity, introduced the fine old Russian shoulders of an overstuffed gentleman named Matros Kirilenko to the mat at the Strand Theater last night while a crowd of 2,000 proved they could "take it" without many qualms of the heart.

Mr. Grobmeier is 6 feet 4 inches tall and his hair hangs in his eyes so badly that it is a reflection on the weight of the purses he is being paid several times a week. But he is a figure in rassling of late, and has been called the "coming 'champion'" by none other than Ed White, the manager of Londos and owner of one-third of the stock of Eastern wrestling.

Kirilenko Is Given "Razz."

Grobmeier drew a Lindberghian cheer when introduced, but the boys in the gallery with the rubber rasses had at the good Dr. Kirilenko (who two months ago was Washington's favorite son). Grobmeier started aggressively and kept it up all 39 minutes. He slapped a great deal, but generally in self-defense, and finished the match with the chassis of his opponent a twisted hogshead of protoplasm impaled in and among the winner's legs.

Legs played a great part in hte match. Kirilenko's look like denuded pistons and Grobmeier's strongly resemble the shanks of a brass heron. Once they sat on the floor facing each other and kicked for two solid minutes. Very droll, gents, very droll.

The semiwindup was the best exhibition of the evening. In it Doc Wilson acquitted himself creditably in staying 45 minutes with Ernie Dusek, the tough little brother of Rudy, the rassler who is so tough that they are going to break him up into D street steaks.

Ernie Dusek Is Tough Like Rudy.

There was more tumbling in it than in the Five Arabians. Dusek seemed tremendously strong, and had a good imitation of Rudy's rocking cradle split; but Doc, with his tackles and butts and nerve twanging, held on for 45 minutes that never lagged. If all rassling matches were as active as this, I'd like to have the local franchise.

Fritz Kiley had trouble showing off with Fred Carone, a large, damp and very serious Italian. Kiley, an acrobat at heart, tried hard to play with the Carone, and, failing, was forced to finish him off in 12 minutes with a resounding back body drop that stirred up the ghosts of Molly Williams and her 20—Bouncing Beauteous Baby Dolls—20.

George Kotsonaros, who holds two decisions over Jim Londos, eluded the clubbing of Tiger Nelson for 20 minutes and then turned on the venerable and kindly old slugger and horizontaled him in 20 minutes with a leg lock.

The show got off on the wrong foot when two middleweight wrestlers, Shabo and Nixon, tugged to a 20-minute draw.

C. U. Meet Tickets Go on Sale Today

Tickets for the third annual Catholic University indoor track meet, scheduled February 27 in Brookland gymnasium, go on sale today at Spalding's, 1338 G street northwest, and at the university athletic office. Prices of admission are $1.50 for reserved seats and $1 for general admission. Alumni associations of institutions represented by teams in the meet may secure blocks of seats by request from Dorsey Griffith, C. U. track coach.

Pyne Winner in 2 Bouts; Bucknell Beats C. U., 4-3

Special to The Washington Post.

SUNBURY, Pa., Feb. 18.—Danny Pyne, sensational Catholic University mittman, scored two wins tonight, but saw his teammates go down to defeat, 4 to 3, as Bucknell University's boxers scored in the lightweights, to give the Washington lads their first defeat in two years. Incidentally, Bucknell was the last team to defeat Catholic U.

Pyne scored a 30-second knockout in the first round of his 165-pound fight against Vandenbree, of Bucknell, who was fighting his first intercollegiate bout. Pyne stepped out to win this bout in short order, in order to conserve his strength for the 175-pound match with Kubachi. In this match the Bucknell man forced the fighting in the first two rounds, but Pyne proved more rugged, and, after scoring a knockdown in the opening seconds of the third round, took the referee's decision.

Stines Scores Other C. U. Win.

Stines was the other Catholic University man to win his fight. He scored on points against Wilkenson in the 145-pound match, which was terrifically fought throughout. Stines used a weaving attack that puzzled his Bucknell opponent. Both men were exhausted at the close of the match.

"Jimmy" Terpolilli, sensational Bison 115-pounder, scored one of the two technical knockouts tallied by Bucknell men, when Referee Leo Houck stopped the fight with Miro in the third round, with the Catholic man on the verge of a knockout.

The other technical knockout was made by Russo, Bucknell 155-pounder, who pummelled Stapleton, veteran visitor, throughout the first minute of the third round, after two rounds of fast milling. So excessive was this punishment that the referee stepped in to save the visiting fighter further damage. Russo's victory clinched the match for Bucknell. It was Stapleton's first defeat in two years.

Capt. "Mickey" Boerner, Bison mauler in the 125-pound clash, had a fairly easy time getting the decision over Calabrese, whose inexperience proved his undoing.

Di Giacomo Loses on Points.

DiGiacomo, acting captain for the Washington team, met a Tartar in the 135-pound class, when "Chippy" Dill, sensational newcomer on the Bison squad, took the decision. The first two rounds were even, but Dill unleashed a driving attack that completely surprised the almost exhausted DiGiacomo in the third round, and the Bison took the bout.

115 POUNDS—Terpolilli (Bucknell) defeated Miro (Catholic); technical knockout, third round.
125 POUNDS—Boerner (Bucknell) defeated Calabrese (Catholic); decision three rounds.
135 POUNDS—Dill (Bucknell) defeated DiGiacomo (Catholic); decision three rounds.
145 POUNDS—Stines (Catholic) defeated Wilkenson (Bucknell); decision three rounds.
155 POUNDS—Russo (Bucknell) defeated Stapelton (Catholic); technical knockout, third round.
165 POUNDS—Pyne (Catholic) defeated Aldenbree (Bucknell); knockout, first round.
175 POUNDS—Pyne (Catholic) defeated Kuback (Bucknell); decision three rounds.

Venzke Convinced Doubters With His Courageous Finish

NEW YORK, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—When Gene Venzeke dashed around the wooden track in Madison Square Garden to a new indoor mile record of 4 minutes 10 seconds last night he wasn't after the record. He was out to prove to himself and any doubters there might be he had the heart to come from behind and win.

Up until the K. of C. games last night Gene had never won an important race. He was always "up there" at the finish, but never first; always the boy who went out and set a fast pace and then watched the headliners whizz past him a lap or so from home.

"A good runner but not much heart," critics said. These reports got back to Gene. He felt the criticisms keenly.

He thought he proved himself ten days ago when he set the world record at 4:11 1-5, winning the Wanamaker mile at the Millrose games, but the doubters still were not convinced.

"Leo Lermond misjudged his sprint," they said. "The next time out the

NEWSPAPERMEN VOTE DECISION TO YOUTH AS 23,000 WITNESS ROUGH AND TUMBLE EXHIBITION

King Levinsky (upper), who drew a cloud over the comeback trail of Jack Dempsey (below) last night in their four-round exhibition by earning the decision of a majority of the newspapermen present. It was a slugging match from start to finish.

Crude Chicagoan Hits Old Champion Hard Throughout.

No Knockdowns in 4 Rounds; Dempsey's Punches Fail.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY.

CHICAGO STADIUM, Chicago, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey's pugilistic comeback ran into a stone wall tonight.

The old Manassa Mauler dropped an unofficial decision, after four furious rounds of fighting to King Levinsky, the Maxwell street fish peddler, who was credited with outslugging the former heavyweight champion of the world.

The match, billed as a four-round exhibition, was a vicious toe-to-toe battle with Levinsky, a crude but powerful and fearless walloper, hitting the old champion almost whenever he pleased and taking everything that Dempsey had to offer in the way of an offense.

As the bout was an exhibition with no official decision, a poll of the newspaper experts was necessary to determine the winner. They voted in favor of Levinsky, and the crowd, too, thought that the reformed fish peddler was the victor, judging from the ovation he received when he left the ring.

23,322 Fans Pay $74,199.95.

The old Manassa mauler, the man who vanquished Jess Willard, Luis Firpo, Georges Carpentier, Tommy Gibbons and other heavyweight stars in spectacular, stirring battles was forced to face the courage and punching power of an opponent 15 years his junior.

The bout, with Dempsey as the magnet, drew a record-smashing attendance of 23,322 paid admissions with the gate receipts of $74,199.95. This eclipsed all previous attendance records for an indoor boxing show.

The confidence that Levinsky displayed at the start, when he set the pace for the first round, carried him through to victory. Dempsey's once famous, deadly bobbing and weaving attack, from which heretofore he administered body punches, and launched his terrific right crosses to the head, appeared to be no more than a shuffle tonight. Before the first round was finished the former champion was breathing heavily and he walked with heavy feet to his corner, whereas Levinsky was strong and fresh as the 21-year-old kid that he is.

Shows Contempt For Dempsey.

Levinsky, the gamecock of the ring, showed contempt for Dempsey's famous left hooks to the head and body, although at times he was guilty of holding on at close range to escape a battering Dempsey appeared certain to deal out to him.

Tonight's bout was Dempsey's first start against a heavyweight of more or less prominence since he dropped the famous fourteen count decision to Gene Tunney in their world's heavyweight championship battle before 145,000 at Soldier Field, nearly four and a half years ago.

After the first round, it was evident that Levinsky was to be the master of the old prop of the heavyweights, unless Dempsey could wang over a knockout punch—something that no other heavyweight has been able to do.

Dempsey Target For Barrage.

In the first round, Jack seemed willing to let Levinsky set the pace and await an opening for his deadly left hook. But Levinsky, who was boxing better and with more courage than he has displayed in previous contests, threw a steady barrage of rights and lefts to Dempsey's head, kept Jack off balance and prevented him launching his deadly attack.

Through the following three rounds it was the same old story. Levinsky, with youth and strength on his side, fifteen years younger than Dempsey, altogether contemptuous of his foe, assuming the aggressive and never letting up in his attack.

The fourth round was the saddest for the old champion. Levinsky suddenly stopped in the center of the ring when Jack began circling around, and scornfully motioned him to "come on and fight." It was a throwback to the famous seventh round of his last championship battle with Tunney in Chicago, only this time it was Dempsey who received the invitation to come in and slug it out. It was Dempsey this time whose legs were a bit faltering and weary and brain may have been dazed under the heavy lefts and rights that Levinsky threw at his head.

Dempsey Stakes All On One Wallop.

To Dempsey's everlasting credit it must be said the old fighting spirit was blazing just as bright as ever. He was always shuffling in close, bobbing and weaving, trying to whip over a knockout punch, but the youth in front of him, with absolutely no fear, was sending the punches right back at him a little faster and a little stronger than he received them. The old fighting spirit unquenchable, Dempsey lunged forward every step of the way in an effort to annihilate the "Kingfish" with one devastating wallop. The bout was so viciously fought that they continued to wallop each other after the bell sounded, and it was necessary for Eddie Purdy, the referee, to pry them apart.

Dempsey paid tribute to Levinsky as a powerful puncher, but he insisted that he was not hurt at any time during the fight.

Levinsky wants to fight Dempsey ten rounds with regulation fighting gloves instead of the ten-ounce pillows they wore tonight.

"He ain't so hot," said the Kingfish, "but he still can punch. He has a good left hook."

THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS

(Associated Press.)

ROUND ONE—They collided in midring with Dempsey pumping rights and lefts to the body. Levinsky missed a right to the head with Dempsey throwing rights to the body. They exchanged body punches in close. Levinsky landed two rights and lefts to the head. Dempsey countered with a right to the head. Dempsey shouldered in close to inflict body punishment. Dempsey drove a right to the body and a left to the head. Levinsky missed two rights to the head with Dempsey digging rights to the body. Levinsky missed a right to the head and went to the ropes. Dempsey landed with a right and left to the jaw and caught on the head in return. Levinsky traded punches to the head with the former champion, as the round ended.

ROUND TWO—Dempsey, crouching and weaving, hooked Levinsky with a left to the jaw. Dempsey blocked two lefts to the head and stepped away from two rights. They traded rights to the head and pounded each other around the body at close range. Dempsey was short with a left hook to the head, and he stepped under two rights to the jaw. Levinsky missed with a right to the head, and Dempsey cracked him with two left hooks to the body. Levinsky stabbed two lefts to the face, catching a right to the head in return. They traded punches to the head in midring. Levinsky missed two rights to the head, with Dempsey throwing left hooks to the body.

ROUND THREE—Dempsey got two lefts to the body and Levinsky smashed a right to the ribs. They traded body punches in close. Once in the clear Dempsey walked into Levinsky and the former champion planted a left and right to the body with Levinsky throwing punches to the head. Jack threw a right to the body and took a right to the head. Levinsky was wild with a right to the head and Jack nailed him with a right cross to the jaw on the rope and Dempsey dug a left to the body. Levinsky connected with a right to the head and two rights to the body. Levinsky landed two lefts and two rights to the head with Jack crowding in. Dempsey hooked a left to the jaw with Levinsky missing a right to the head. Levinsky threw two lefts and two rights to the head as the round ended.

ROUND FOUR—They shook hands and both missed lefts to the head. Levinsky threw a right to the body and a right to the jaw as Dempsey came tearing in. Dempsey tried to weave inside and Levinsky cracked him with two rights to the jaw, catching a left in return. They slugged each other around the body. They stood in midring trading punches to the head. They traded rights to the head and Levinsky motioned for Dempsey to come on and fight. Levinsky threw two rights to the head. Both missed punches to the head and they fought after the bell sounded.

"Amazons" Clash On He-Night Bill

Women's Bout Feature of Benefit Rockville Boxing Card Monday Night.

A battle of Amazons is one of the advertised features of the annual he-night athletic program to be held next Monday night under auspices of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department at Congressional Airport at Halpine, Md., on the Rockville pike. "Battling Susie" McGuire and "Crusher Jane" Smith are the principals in this bout which is to be fought with gloves.

Eleven events comprise the program, tickets for which are now available at Vic's, 716 Ninth street northwest, and Fairway, 1346 G street northwest.

In the main boxing bout Lou Raymond, clever Baltimore welterweight and recent conquerer of Sammy Braunstein, will meet Pepper Young, veteran Norfolk battler. Arthur DeBeve, former lightweight champion of France, will tangle with Jimmy "Sailor" McKenna in the eight-round semifinal. A six-rounder and three bouts of four rounds each complete the boxing part of the bill, while in addition there will be a battle royal, a wrestling match between Joe Turner and Frank McCray, a bout between a wrestler and a boxer, and dances by proteges of Mary Hipple.

Hicks and Orcutt In Florida Finals

Edith Quier Loses to Maureen, 6 and 5; Helen Defeats Mrs. Sterrett.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Society here expects a battle tomorrow when Helen Hicks, national woman's champion, and Maureen Orcutt, former Metropolitan title holder, meet in the finals of the Florida women's golf tournament.

Today in defeating Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., the medalist, Miss Orcutt needed only 35 strokes on the outgoing nine, having Miss Quier 3 down at the turn. She then proceeded to win, 6 and 5.

Miss Hicks had a harder time eliminating Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, who played virtually on even terms until they reached the homeward nine. The Kansas woman then weakened and took three 6s out of five holes, halving only one, and lost, 5 and 4.

If Miss Orcutt wins the tournament she will send competition for permanent possession of the trophy into a three-way tie. Miss Hicks and Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, each has two legs on the cup, while Miss Orcutt now has one. Three are required for possession.

British Yachtsmen Planning Challenge for America's Cup

LONDON, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Despite the death of Sir Thomas Lipton, who was believed to be the only British yachtsman who could afford to challenge for the America's Cup, there are strong indications that another British challenge for the historic trophy may be forthcoming soon.

The British Racing Union has adopted a resolution, addressed to the New York Yacht Club, which holds the trophy, requesting that suggestions be considered modifying the present rules of construction of the masts of Class 1 yachts, the cup class.

After the Enterprise, carrying a duraluminum mast, outraced Shamrock V in 1930, a minimum weight rule for masts was passed, providing that they must weigh at least 5,800 pounds. The suggestion made by the British Union yesterday was that the masts be made either of wood or steel and that the minimum mast weight rule be altered to cover all fittings attached direct to the masts for sails and rigging.

The suggestions were believed to be the first indication of a new British challenge for the cup.

VANDERPOOL TRAILS DON LEON, PANETIAN AT HIALEAH

Collins' Colt Is Driving Winner

Beats Panetian Half Length; Vanderpool Is Poor Third.

Foreign Play, by Epinard, Pays $43.10 in Opener.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Don Leon, the Western flash owned by R. W. Collins, caused a mild surprise here today by turning in one of his best efforts to lead home a small but select field of sprinters in the featured Palatka Handicap. The colt was driving hard to score over G. D. Widener's Panetian by a half length, while Vanderpool, the choice, was beaten three lengths for the place. French Lass was fourth and last.

Don Leon paid $7.90 for a $2 ticket and covered the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5 under 113 pounds. Vanderpool hauled 126, while Panetian carried 117.

Don Leon Shoots Away Like Bullet.

Don Leon shot away from the barrier like a bullet. Panetian, acting fractious and being put on the outside, broke sideways, but rushed up and forced the fast pace. French Lass and Vanderpool were close up, racing like a team. Don Leon saved ground and, showing unusual gameness, held Panetian safe under good handling by "Red" Pollard. Vanderpool had a hard time, drawing away slightly from the lightly weighted French Less to take third money.

A very ordinary field of maiden fillies clashed in the curtain-raiser and, as might have been expected, a long shot took the purse. Foreign Play, at $43.10, lasted to beat Move Along, the favorite, by a head, with Fair Blanche, also well played, a length and a half away in the third notch. Foreign Play forced Chief Camille's pace to the head of the stretch, where the daughter of the famous French horse Epinard assumed command. Move Along and Fair Blanche came from the middle of the pack to challenge the winner, but Foreign Play barely stuck it out.

Gilbert Rides Three Havana Winners.

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Jockey Johnny Gilbert, the riding ace of the Cuban race meeting, again dominated the program at Oriental Park as he scored with three of his mounts today. He also placed second with May Agnes K. in the second race and third with Czarist in the sixth.

Gilbert's triple overshadowed the triumph of J. Hayes' Vladimir in the 6 furlong feature for 3-year-olds and upward, the 5-year-old son of Stefan the Great stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 to defeat W. F. Axton's Monks First going away with George Collins' Justina third. Vladimir was a 7 to 5 choice to win his third consecutive race at the local course.

Gilbert had a leg up on Vladimir and also won with George Collins' Thistle Telee in the third race and with J. Lowe's Thunwin in the seventh.

Wotan Is Again Victor at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Eddie Haughton's Wotan, which jumped from a cheap claimer to a high class performer in a few months, kept his consistent winter turf record intact when he won the James Rowe, jr., Memorial Handicap over 1 1-16 miles at the Fair Grounds today.

Earl Pool, upon Wotan, let Tony Pascuma set the pace with J. J. Robinson's flashy 3-year-old, Renaissance, but once the leaders hit the stretch the Haughton color-bearer bounded out in front and at the judges' stand was four lengths in front of Renaissance. The latter easily beat C. V. Whitney's Chene for the place.

Although packing the top weight of 120 pounds, Wotan was made the 2 to 1 favorite. He ran the distance in 1:48 1-5.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs; purse, $1,000; claiming; for 3-year-olds and upward.

—Hialeah Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Feb. 18.—The Orange Blossom Handicap, fashioned for 3-year-olds and upward, holds the center of attraction on the Hialeah Park program tomorrow. This event, a test over the 1-mile course, received a list of five sterling performers which will contest the $1,500 purse. The remainder of the card brings out the customary platers, with several well-filled events under claiming conditions.

Joe Howard's consistent ISLAM, which scored in his last two starts at this track, is the most fancied in the feature attraction. The son of The Porter may encounter stern opposition from PRINCE TOKALON. The latter showed the way to a clever field of sprinters in his last victorious effort and is nicely suited by the conditions. MY DANDY, from the Reichert Bros. string, is rounding to form, but may find the mile distance a trifle too far.

FIRST RACE—J. C. Ellis' recent winner, ELLICE, has the class of his rivals and figures to romp to an easy victory. THE GEN has shown speed on occasions, but is unreliable. However, the G. C. Winfrey color bearer is favored for the place, with SHORT STORY third.

SECOND RACE—MAEANTIC has improved in recent races and against this band of nonwinners should graduate. NORMAN and ROME VENNIE have turned in several smart trials which attest their fitness.

THIRD RACE—LIONHEARTED, on his recent third to Partisan, is the most fancied. EL PUMA showed a dull effort last start, but previously displayed a clever performance over a route. On his best form the B. B. Stable color bearer may prove dangerous. DRESS SHIP appears best of the others for the minor award.

FOURTH RACE—DOUBLE HEART is well placed. The P. H. Carpenter entrant stepped this distance in 1:11 3-5 last start and has only to repeat that effort to score. BACCIOCCO has been freshened up and appears ready to contest the issue. SINGLE STAR is moving up in this class, but should account for the show.

SIXTH RACE—G. W. Ogle's TROMBONE is selected. The St. James colt will have BAY ANGON to beat for the honors. The latter showed a splendid effort last outing. BLUE ARAB and DYAK are closely rated for the short end of the purse.

SEVENTH RACE—PRETTY PENNY figures best. MOROCCO closed considerable ground last start to finish third and should improve off that effort. BOUNDING DEEP has raced consistently over a route and must be accorded a chance on his best form.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREIGN PLAY, $43.10, $15.10, $5.80; MOVE ALONG, $3.50, $2.70; FAIR BLANCHE, $3.30.

FOREIGN PLAY, in close pursuit of pace to stretch turn, where she shook off CHIEF'S CAMILLE, stood long drive and just managed to last long enough to stall off MOVE ALONG. Latter raced on outside entire journey and was carried extremely wide entering home stretch, was gradually gaining and would have won in a few more strides. FAIR BLANCHE finished with good courage. POETIC LICENSE, very fractious at post, propped when break came.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:54. Winner, Mrs. S. F. Murphy's br. f. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MODESTO, $9.60, $3.10, $3.00; VIA APPIA (field), $2.60, $2.90; DUSKY DAME, $2.90.

MODESTO broke well and, a keen factor to furlong pole, responded with a good effort when out to a drive and, after disposing of tiring DUSKY DAME, lasted long enough to stall off VIA APPIA. Latter responded with splendid courage under punishment and was gradually gaining on the winner. DUSKY DAME broke fast and drew away first quarter, looked a certain winner at furlong pole, but tired badly at end. MINTOGEE broke in a tangle.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:22½. Winner, Ward and Burton's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER LAKE, $34.00, $21.30, $7.20; MISS AVONDALE, $14.50, $4.60; BLACK DOVE, $2.60.

SILVER LAKE broke slowly, but began gaining rounding the far turn, responded full of courage to a drive in stretch run and, closing with a rush, won going away. MISS AVONDALE bore over in behind BLACK DOVE inside the furlong pole, but was taken out in the final sixteenth and outgamed BLACK DOVE for home to drive. BLACK DOVE quit when challenged. HAYTIME showed a flash of early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Bok Tower Purse. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:52. Winner, J. W. May's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLEASE, $5.20, $3.50, $2.60; SALISBURY, $6.10, $4.20; GLENSIDE, $4.40.

PLEASE, showing lot of foot from the start, assumed an early lead in the first furlong, galloped in front remainder of trip. SALISBURY, under slight restraint well around far turn, wore down GLENSIDE in stretch run and outgamed latter in final strides. GLENSIDE had nothing in reserve in final stages. ALDERSHOT made a wide turn into home stretch and bore over to inside at end. GARLIC and TARNISH were trailers from the start.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Palatka Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:19. Off at 4:22. Winner, R. W. Collins' ch. c. (4), by Lee J. Cotner—Water Willow. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $300; third, $100. Time, 0:23, 0:45 3-5, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON LEON, $7.90, $4.20, out; PANETIAN, $3.70, out; VANDERPOOL, out.

DON LEON outbroke his field and set a rapid pace all the way, saved ground at all turns and hung on gamely in final drive. PANETIAN, fractious at the post, was taken to the extreme outside. He broke sideways and had a length the worst of it when start came. He was on the outside of winner all the way. VANDERPOOL outgamed FRENCH LASS in stretch drive.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:51½. Winner, Mrs. S. H. Hart's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COOTS, $12.10, $4.70, $3.00; CALGARY KAY, $3.10, $2.30; SUN TEATIME, $2.80.

COOTS, outrun first quarter, gradually improved his position rounding the far turn, worked his way up on the outside and finished full of courage. He was driving hard at end to stall off CALGARY KAY. Latter closed with a rush after making a wide turn into home stretch. SUN TEATIME tired badly last furlong. PRIORESS quit after making her challenge at top of home stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:19. Off at 5:22. Winner, R. A. Smith's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHANTOM ROCK, $15.30, $5.50, $3.20; BROADWAY LIGHTS, $4.10, $2.80; BROOKSIE, $3.10.

PHANTOM ROCK was rated close to pace, began to move up rounding into stretch and, responding gamely to hard urging, wore down BROADWAY LIGHTS and drew away slightly in closing strides. BROADWAY LIGHTS broke well, but dropped right back. He moved up very fast half way through back stretch and overhauled BROOKSIE at furlong pole, but faltered when challenged by the winner. BROOKSIE showed good speed for a mile, then tired. IRON CZAR broke well, but was badly outrun for six furlongs and closed ground on outside.

DAY NURSERY FIGHT CARD COMPLETE

Kirkwood - Raymond in Semifinal to Weiner-Brown Feature.

THE complete card, comprising 34 rounds of boxing, to be held next Tuesday night under auspices of the Alexandria Day Nursery Athletic Association in Portner's Arena, was announced last night. There will be, in addition to the Natie Brown-Herman Weiner feature of eight rounds, a semifinal of eight, a six-round main preliminary and three other preliminaries of four rounds each.

On paper, the program is just about as appealing as any staged in the Virginia city this season. Brown crowded into popularity with the fans through a victory over Marty Gallagher, following a draw with Reds Barry. The Philadelphia Hebrew, who soon will marry a Washington girl and establish residence here, redeemed himself in the Gallagher bout for a mediocre performance against Barry.

Weiner caught the fans' fancy by his plain, old-fashioned walloping tactics which, though fruitless with respect to the decisions, enabled him to floor both Gallagher and Barry. He lost the decision to Gallagher and secured a draw with Barry.

In the semifinal of eight rounds Walter Kirkwood, clever Norfolk middleweight, will meet Joey Raymond, hard-punching Baltimorean. Kirkwood recently conquered Henry Irving, local knockout artist, with an ease that surprised the patrons, as well as Sir Henry. In Raymond he engages a much more experienced foe, who has to his credit a victory over Joe Finazzo.

Perry and Belt In Prelims.

Jack Perry and Jesse Belt, those tireless sluggers who staged a throbbing brawl to a draw two weeks ago, are signed for return appearances, but in different fights. The management, fearing a repetition of their last clash might result in one or both of them sustaining serious injury, has pitted Perry against Benny Tillman, of Hazleton, Pa., for six rounds and Belt against Jack Quigley, of Washington, for four rounds. Both Perry and Belt, who are welterweights, probably will hold a weight advantage over their opponents, who are fair boxers.

Young Vail, local middleweight, who scored a technical kayo over Johnny Edwards, of Warrenton, last Tuesday, will engage Battling Casey, of Baltimore, in a four-rounder, while Joey Schwartz, Baltimore featherweight, is down for four rounds with Len King, of Warrenton, Va.

GOLF WAR LOOMS OVER TRIAL DATES

We like the Columbia Club, but we do not need it. The Congressional course was kindly offered at our meeting Wednesday night, and I am sure the Indian Spring Club would be glad to have the event held on that course.

Chevy Chase Campaigned For Dates.

"It seems to me, however, that if the Columbia Club was really interested in securing the national amateur qualification it would not have allowed a whole year to pass without taking further steps to get the assignment. On the contrary, the Chevy Chase Club, through a delegation from the Maryland State Golf Association at the national amateur championship at Beverly Hills last fall, urged its willingness to stage the event and followed this up with representations at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association. The Chevy Chase Club was working all the time to get the event, while the Columbia Club was doing nothing. It has not yet been definitely announced that both the national amateur and national open qualifications will be held in Washington, but if they are my judgment is that the amateur will be assigned to Chevy Chase. The Columbia Club may appeal to the national body, but apparently the latter has placed the whole matter of qualification for the national open in the hands of the District association for action. We are ready and willing to accept the responsibility, and if Columbia does not want the event we will find another course."

VENZKE CONVINCED DOUBTERS IN FINISH

Boston strong boy will take Venzeke."

Gene went out last night and disproved all that. He came from behind after Lermond and Frank Crowley had set the pace for the first half mile and ran his rivals dizzy with the most brilliant finish in the history of mile foot racing.

Venzeke will run no more indoor miles this season, but next week he will have a chance to add to his record accomplishments at a brace of shorter distances. He expects to race 1,000 yards in the national A. A. U. championships Monday and then wind up his campaign on the boards in a special 1,500-meter race featuring the Knights of Columbus meet at Madison Square Garden Saturday.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS. —By John Hix

2-19-32

A VALUABLE addition to "Strange As It Seems" was received recently in the form of a big package from Mr. R. W. Koblegard, of Fort Pierce, Fla. It was a box of "Indian Bells," or "Life Plants;" beautiful tropical plants with little bell-shaped flowers. But it is the leaves of the plant that are most interesting.

Take one of the leaves from the plant, which is known scientifically as Bryophyllum, and hang it by a thread to a curtain or some other place where it will receive plenty of warmth and sunshine. Soon, without any soil, water or care of any kind, little buds will appear on the edges of the "life leaf," and grow into small leaves. Within a short time the leaf will become a "living chandelier." If the shoots are set in sandy soil and transplanted in the springtime they will grow into new plants.

* * * *

Another addition to the "Strange Museum" came from the Hoquiam, Wash., Chamber of Commerce. It is a little bottle of worms. * * * "snow worms!" In a letter written on Sitka Spruce wood, cut one-eighteith of an inch thick, we are assured that these tiny black worms actually thrive on the snow of the Olympic Mountains. Their real name is Mesenchytraeus Solifugust Var Olympiensus—rather lengthy for a creature one-quarter inch long—and they feed on algae contained in the pink snow.

Also in the week's mail was an egg shaped like a peanut—and just about as large. This one was sent by Mrs. Beda Robertson, of Worthington, Mass. There also came a cucumber 18 inches long, a sieve that holds water, a teakettle made out of a one-cent bronze piece and many other curiosities.

Any reader wanting further proof of anything depicted here should address the author, care of The Washington Post, and inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

D. C. COLLEGES IN 15 EVENTS

Franklin Five Plays Bliss Tonight

G. W. Mermen Hosts to William and Mary Team.

Old Line Boxers Will Feature Card Here Tomorrow.

CAPITAL collegiate athletes tonight enter upon their busiest week-end of competition of the current winter, all of the major teams and some of the minor group being scheduled to take part in 15 contests in basket ball, boxing, swimming and track.

A great majority of the contests will be staged in foreign territory, to be exact, 11. Those listed for home consumption are two basket ball games, a swimming meet and a boxing match. Local events to be held tonight will find Bliss engaging Benjamin Franklin in a court tilt at Silver Spring Armory and George Washington's swimmers competing against the natators of William and Mary College in the pool of the Ambassador Hotel.

Maryland Boxers in Action.

Tomorrow night's two home contest are the boxing match between Maryland University and North Carolina State in Ritchie Coliseum, and the basket ball clash between Gallaudet and Columbus at Kendall Green.

Maryland, Georgetown, Catholic, American and Gallaudet fives are to oppose strong foes on out-of-town courts tonight. Maryland meets North Carolina in a Southern Conference game at Chapel Hill, N. C.; Georgetown battles West Virginia at Morgantown; American opposes Pennsylvania Military College, at Chester, Pa.; Catholic tackles the National Guards in New York, and Gallaudet plays Maryland State Normal at Towson, Md. Maryland seeks to stretch its string of victories to 15 in the battle with North Carolina, while Georgetown hopes to repeat an earlier victory over West Virginia.

American is out for its second straight win at Chester, while Gallaudet aims to begin a new winning streak at the expense of Maryland Normal. Catholic has not met the New York Guardsmen previously.

Six basket ball games and a track meet are on the program tomorrow night, all away from home. Catholic and Georgetown will have representatives in the Meadowbrook games in Philadelphia, and the following court contests will be played: Maryland vs. Duke at Durham, N. C.; American vs. Villanova, at Villanova, Pa.; Georgetown vs. Duquesne, at Pittsburgh; Catholic vs. Manhattan, at New York, and Strayer vs. St. James, at Hagerstown, Md.

Meet at Post to Form Prep School Court League

"Y" FLASHES 130-POUND CHOICES

Rated Near Top of Class in A. A. U. Title Event.

WHEN the A. A. U. basket ball tourney, sponsored by The Post, opens on March 1 at the Tech High School Gym, one of the favorites to win the 130-pound championship will be the Y. M. C. A. Flashes.

The Flashes have exhibited a sparkling brand of play all season, winning fourteen of the twenty games played to date, losing the others by small margins. They have scored 657 points to their opponents' 448, and recently inaugurated a winning streak which has now stretched to 10 games. Bill Fry is the leading scorer of the team with 204 points to his credit. Next in line is Joe Curtice, with 117, and Dave Ableman, with 96, is third.

Coach Looks for Success For Team.

The roster of the team includes Veihmeyer, Baker, Norsworthy, Gray, Rodes, Hurley, Taylor, Boggs, Heller, and Rubino. Mars DeGast, physical instructor at the Y. M. C. A., is coaching the team. The latter believes that the boys will perform creditably in the tournament.

Only five days remain in which teams may enter the tournament, Charles M. Fyfe, chairman of the A. A. U. registration committee, has announced that a large number of players have registered during the past week, and he expects many more before the end of this week. Team entry blanks for all classes, boys and girls, must be in by midnight, Tuesday. None will be accepted after this date. It is an old custom with the basket ball teams to wait until the last minute before submitting their entry, and from present indications there will be another eleventh hour rush this year.

Hitting The Head Pin

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S birthday will not pass unnoticed by local bowlers—that is, not if Bill Wood can help it. Bill has arranged a sweepstakes for that day, named after the Father of the Country, at a bargain price, $15.

No qualifications are necessary to join in the fun, figuratively speaking, for it is open to all with the necessary number of greenbacks and enough confidence in their ability to vie with the big fellows. The first five games of the fifteen comprising the stakes will be rolled at 11 a. m., the second at 2 p. m., and the third at 8 p. m All at Lucky Strike, of course

Wood has made the prize list attractive enough to entice the worst of the dubs There will be four major prizes, the size of which will be in proportion to that of the entry list. In addition, $5 will be awarded for the high game and high set of each block.

The Suburban Doubles Sweepstakes will be rolled February 27 and March 5, it was announced yesterday. The initial block of the ten games will be rolled at the Georgetown Recreation alleys at 7:30 p. m., and the second at the Alexandria Health Center alleys. No team with a combined average in excess of 225 is eligible. The entrance fee of $10 also includes the cost of the games. Entries will be received at the Georgetown alleys until starting time, February 27.

Patents No. 2, which is leading the race for the banner in the Department of Commerce League, is slated to go to Hanover, Pa., tomorrow for a return match with the Moose Stars of that city. While in Hanover the local quintet will also meet the powerful McClarin Team, which won the York County championship in 1930.

When they break records in the War Department League they do it on a large scale. Four marks were boosted a little higher last night. They were Gale Feaster's game of 160, Penfold's 402 set, Hydrographic's 1,726 set and Statistics' 603 game. The race in this loop resembles the rocky road to Dublin. Hydrographic is leading, six games ahead of its closest rivals. The rivals are Finance, Statistics and Engineers, who are running neck and neck for the runner-up position.

Temple whitewashed Lucky Strike in their National Capital League match at Lucky Strike last night. Temple's set was 1,776, which includes a 614 game. Earl McPhilomy's 384 set and the old reliable "Reds" Megaw copped the game honors with his 134.

Skinker Motors was high in the Automotive League, with scores of 593 and 1,598, despite a two-game loss to Steuart Motors. Bill Cook bagged the individual honors with a 141 game and 349 set. Buick let Trew Motors down without a losing a game and Emerson & Orme addgamed a win out of H. B. Leary.

After losing the first game by nine pins, Lansburgh No. 1 won the final two from Chestnut Farms in the King Pin Business Men's League. The losers rolled a set of 1,714 to their opponents' 1,703.

The worm, or rather the Dodgers, turned in the Recreation League last night and put over a 2-1 win at the expense of Cook's Bakery at the G street alleys. The winners rolled a 617 game and 1,710 set, which is pretty good for a team that has either been in the cellar or only halfway out of it all season. Kral's 414 set, comprising games of 123, 150 and 141, led the scoring. Fox Theater and the Cubs won all three from the Sims Music Studio and Stantons. The Blue Flames forfeited to the Pops and the Rex-Union Terminal Market fracas was postponed.

Potomac cleaned up in the Masonic League at Convention Hall last night, walking off with high game of 605 and set of 1,754. Jack Ulrich and Osser tied for the individual game honors at 142, but Ulrich continued his good work to cop the set laurels with 392.

The Post Composing Room team clamped down on the scoring honors in the Daylight League at Convention Hall, rolling a 561 game and 1,579 set, but that didn't prevent the Circulation boys from upstairs from winning two. The Post Press quintet shut-out the Herald, Bond Bread took the odd-one from the Occidental Hotel and the Star whitewashed the Master Printers in the other matches. Plantz, of the Star, copped the individual set honors with his 357. Butler, of the same team, had high game of 134.

Depreciation, with a set of 1,518 and 519 game to its credit, won all three from Cost in the Interstate Commerce League at Columbia. Value and Recapture also swept their matches with Investment and Finance. Tolson's 338 set and 134 game were high.

Land's 1,625 and 579 scores enabled it to land a trio from G. H. I. in the Interior loop at Columbia. Overheim's 365 and 136 topped the individual pin spilling.

"Bumpe" Buell, of Maryland, romped off with the cash in the intercollegiate loop at Rendezvous by toppling the pins for a 149 game and 357 set. Dartmouth won the odd one from Lehigh by virtue of its 1,556 set. The losers had high game of 538 for the night. All of the other matches were decided by the third games. Navy, V. M. I., Michigan, Harvard and Cornell nosed out Maryland, V. P. I., Yale, Princeton and Brown.

The Fountain Hams pasted a 2-1 defeat on Petworth in the District League. Brad Mandley's 382 set was high.

FANCY SHOT CUE KINGS HERE

Peterson-Ribas Open Title Play Tonight at K. C. Temple.

DISTRICT billiard fans are promised some real treats at the Knights of Columbus Temple, 920 Tenth street northwest, tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night, when Charlie Peterson, generally accepted world's fancy shot artist, meets a real challenger in Isidro Ribas, of Spain.

This will be the first time a trick-shot tournament has ever been staged here, and the Washington series is one of five to decide the world's title. The first of these series was completed in St. Louis early this week, with Peterson holding a small lead over the Spaniard, who has proven himself to be a real master of the ivory balls.

Four Tries Allowed on Each Shot.

In this title set, each of these cue magicians has named his 50 hardest tricks. The rules allow each four tries at each trick to be scored, one, two, three, four, according to the number of shots required. If a player misses all four tries, he is charged with five points, low total score to win.

And, reports from St. Louis, where the first series was played, are to the effect that one of the most interesting matches in the history of cue tournaments resulted. In their last match both failed to make ten of the same shots in the alloted four tries, while Peterson failed on three others and Ribas on five.

Better scores are looked for here tonight and tomorrow in view of the fact that the players are now on their second run of the 100 trick shots listed. The night matches start at 8:30, with tomorrow's matinee due to get under way at 3 o'clock. Tickets are on sale at the K. C. Temple and at Lewis & Krauss, 810 Fourteenth street northwest.

WEDNESDAY NIGHTERS WIN.

The Wednesday Night Team last night copped the round-robin tournament from the Thursday Night Team of the Washington Badminton Club, 8 to 6, in the first team championship conducted by the club. The victors gained the decision by taking four of the six mixed doubles matches.

Maryland U. Meets Hopkins on Tuesday

In order to secure an extra day of rest before beginning its quest of the 1932 Southern Conference championship at Atlanta, Ga., Maryland University's basket ball team, 1931 champions, has moved up the date of its late regularly scheduled game with Johns Hopkins from next Wednesday to Tuesday. The Old Liners, in charge of Coach Burton Shipley, will leave for the Atlanta tourney on Wednesday and play will commence on Friday.

Delaware-Hudson Five Meets K. of C. Tonight

The Knights of Columbus unlimited team will meet the strong Delaware and Hudson quintet tonight at 7 o'clock, at Tech High School. The Coalmen captured the championship in section B, of the Community Center League Wednesday night, and are favored to win over the Knights, who have won 20 victories in 28 games this season.

Sunday the Caseys are scheduled to play the Jewish Community Center unlimited team at 2 o'clock, in the Silver Spring armory. The Center lost the first encounter between the two teams by a one-point margin after leading up until the last few minutes of the game.

Kennell Club's Show Listed April 22-23

The National Capital Kennel Club announced last night that it will hold its annual dog show at the Washington Auditorium, April 22 and 23, with the greatest field of entrants ever to participate in a meet in this region.

Although entries do not officially open until March 15, many prominent fanciers have sought stalls.

Eight nationally known judges have been secured. They are W. Fred Ford, pointers, English and Gordon setters; G. V. Glebe, all rounders and best dog; Julian M. Platz, Boston terriers; A. Albright, jr., terriers; Harold B. Johnson, cocker spaniels; Mrs. M. B. Smith, bull terriers; W. E. Chetwin, bulldogs and Peter C. Barr, toy breeds.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Swamped by Western

Western High School Basket Ball Team enjoyed the rare experience of swamping an opponent when it copped a 44-24 decision from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School yesterday. The Georgetowners jumped into the lead at the start of the fray and were never headed, leading by the score of 25-13 at the intermission.

St. John's, Gonzaga Fives Clash Tonight

Rivalry of a traditional sort will find its culmination tonight at St. John's when Gonzaga is entertained in a game starting at 8 o'clock. It is the feature of three games which the prep schools will provide for public consumption.

In the other two games St. Alban's plays Woodbery Forest, at St. Alban's, and Georgetown Prep meets Mount St. Joseph's, at Georgetown.

St. John's is a strong favorite to beat Gonzaga. The Johnnies have won 14 out of 18 games this season.

C. U. TRACKMAN HURT.

George Garafalo, promising Catholic University distance runner, is out for the winter indoor season with a foot injury. Garafalo was to have competed in the two-mile run at the Meadowbrook games in Philadelphia tomorrow night and also in Catholic University's annual meet on February 27 at Brookland.

Y. M. C. A. TO WRESTLE.

The local Y. M. C. A. wrestling team meets the Baltimore Y grapplers tomorrow night at the Y. M. C. A. The local team will be made up of Anderson, Shockley, Payne, McGrath, Sergeant, Brothers, Whitworth, Paul and Ballard.

The locals won the District team title Wednesday night, by beating the J. C. C., but hold little hope of victory against the rugged Baltimoreans.

CAPITAL TOWERS WINS.

Cecil Hale's Capital Towers 115-pound quintet scored its fifteenth consecutive victory of the season when it defeated the Noel House, 35-32, last night. The Towers team challenges the "Y" Flashes. Hale can be reached at Atlantic 2367.

Saks Defeated, 39-37, By Quantico Marines

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., Feb. 18.—A field goal in the final 15 seconds of play by Locke, enabled the Quantico Marines to nose out the Saks Clothiers, 39-37, in a game filled to the overflowing, played here tonight. The victory avenged the Devil Dogs for a previous defeat inflicted by the Clothiers.

The Marines helped themselves to the lead in the first period and led at the half, 21-16, despite numerous threats of the visitors. Saks gradually closed the gap between the two teams in the third period, and was on the long end of a 32-30 count as the game went into the final period. It maintained this slim advantage until the final minute of play when the Marines knotted the count at 35-35. Sleight put the Marines ahead at this juncture with a pretty potshot from the side with less than a minute of play remaining, but Bernie Jones matched this to again tie the score. It was then that Locke came through with his game-winning goal.

SISK AND DIAGNOSIS BOTH EXONERATED AT SENATE HEARING

Doctor Is Cleared of Blame in Death of Young Newspaperman.

VICTIM'S NAME FREED OF "DRUNKEN" STIGMA

Other Emergency Hospital Interne Accused Will Be Heard Tuesday.

Joseph Sisk, 24-year-old Baltimore newspaperman, was exonerated, after death, of "drunk" charges, and Dr Saul Schwartzbach, Emergency Hospital interne, was relieved of blame in his death, at hearings yesterday before a Senate investigating committee.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, after hearing Emergency and Gallinger Hospital physicians, declared Sisk's death "foreordained" by the nature of his injuries. He said there was no evidence Sisk was intoxicated, as claimed by Dr. Schwartzbach.

Dr. Charles Bastable, another Emergency interne, admitted refusing to treat a patient when the latter complained the ambulance was tardy. The interne said he was "sorry," but was provoked by the surly manner of the patient. The hospital board, which suspended Bastable, announced they would deal with his case at a meeting Tuesday.

Emergency Diagnosis.

Sisk, who was injured in a Mount Rainier automobile accident January 29, was taken in a Fifth Precinct patrol to Emergency Hospital, where Dr. Schwartzeach diagnosed his case as intoxication and "possible fractured vertebrae." Despite the latter, he said, he thought there was nothing seriously wrong with Sisk, whom he ordered transferred to Gallinger in the Fifth Precinct patrol.

When Sisk arrived at Gallinger he was in a state of shock, and Dr. James Whisman, interne on duty, told the police who brought him "he probably would not live through the night," Dr. Whisman told the committee yesterday. He said he found no evidence of intoxication.

The Gallinger interne's diagnosis sharply conflicted with Schwartzbach's on virtually every point. Whisman said he found symptoms of lung puncture and fractured pelvis, which X-ray examination subsequently sustained. An autopsy later disclosed a fractured diaphragm, but no evidence of fractured vertebrae.

Hospital System Told.

Schwartzbach testified that Sisk's pulse was 86 when he left Emergency; Whisman said it was 160 on arrival at Gallinger. He said that Sisk was "restless," apparently from pain, whereas Schwartzbach had declared him "obstreperous."

Policeman William Rabil, of the Fifth Precinct, who accompanied Sisk to Gallinger in the patrol, sought to account for part of the change in his condition between the time he left Emergency and arrived at Gallinger. He said Sisk had a hemorrhage en route, and he noticed his complexion had changed to "gray" on arrival at Gallinger.

Director George S. Wilson, of the Board of Public Welfare; Supt. B. B. Sandidge, of Emergency Hospital; Woodbury Blair, chairman of the Emergency board, and Dr. James Mitchell, a member of the Emergency staff, testified on the Emergency Hospital set-up and the practice of transferring patients from one hospital to another.

Interne's Action Approved.

Dr. Mitchell said he investigated the case the next day and approved of the action taken by Schwartzbach. He said he believed it impossible to make a thorough diagnosis under the conditions, and, as there were no available beds, Schwartzbach was merely following hospital rules in transferring Sisk to Gallinger.

Mr. Sandidge testified that Schwartzbach had a flawless record. He said the interne had been advanced to "assistant resident physician" after a year's service at the hospital and was in line for advancement to resident physician.

"This is just one of those sad, unhappy, miserable events against which with present knowledge we can not guard," Senator Copeland said in concluding the hearing.

He said the case should furnish incentive to the community to obtain more funds for expanding Emergency's facilities, adding: "There ought to be a reorganization of the entire hospital system in Washington."

Dr. Copeland said it was "too bad" Sisk could not have been put to bed at Emergency, but limited facilities made that impossible. He said, however, he had never known a punctured lung case to recover, and regardless of what attention was given him, he believed Sisk would have died.

The fact that Dr. Schwartzbach "did not diagnose as well" as Dr. Whisman did not indicate the latter was any better physician, Dr. Copeland said.

Should Dr. Bastable be dropped from the Emergency staff for leaving the home of Samuel Podell after Podell complained he was late in responding to an ambulance call, his professional career would be "ruined," one member of the Emergency staff said yesterday. Indications were that he would be placed on probation.

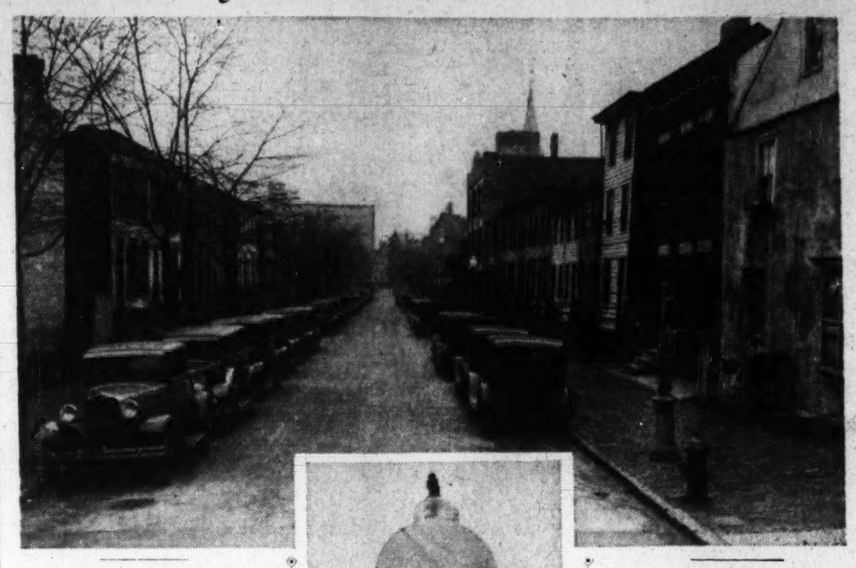
Physician Is Attacked While Answering Call

A doctor attached to Casualty Hospital was attacked and beaten last night after responding to a call at 1908 Fourth street northeast to treat Lawrence Pettit, 23 years old, for a lacerated hand.

Pettit, it is alleged, attacked Dr. W. E. Bowman and M. Ellis, colored ambulance driver, when they attempted to place him in the ambulance for removal to the hospital.

Pettit was later arrested when he applied for treatment at Sibley Hospital and police of the Fifth Precinct took him to Gallinger Hospital, where he is being held on charges of drunkenness and assault.

Washington Street in Nation's Capital Is Sorry Memorial to First President



General view of Washington street and lamp post designating this one block thoroughfare named after the First President.

Old and Decaying Byway, Only Block Long, Not Easy to Discover.

Washington street!

If there is a Washington street in the National Capital, all good Americans might rightly ask why hasn't it been given a place in the great celebration which begins next Monday? Why should not the thoroughfare thus honored bear the tramp of marching feet, echo with the thrilling music of trumpet and drum?

Yes, why? Thereby hangs a tale, an unpleasant one. A Post reporter went in search of Washington street.

Washington street is just a block in length, running from Fourth to Fifth streets between G and H streets northwest. On a lamp post is the name of the Father of His Country.

Only one thing in the neighborhood holds itself on a level of respect to that name. This is a Catholic church and parochial school. These respectable buildings are not actually on the street, but on the corner. However, a portion of the parochial school flanks the street. The spire of the church towers proudly above the squat, dirty buildings.

If George Washington looked upon this street, the only consolation he could find would be this school and church. Beyond that he might well wonder, without egotism, why the street was given his name.

The street resembles a scene utterly detached from anything American. Rotting frame houses flank this street. A few of the buildings are of dirty brick. Wooden stairways lead from most of the houses. Underneath these steps the odds and ends of unwanted things are thrown—fruit peelings, discarded household articles, a broken baby carriage. There was a faint indication when the street was seen yesterday of an effort to clean the place up. A pathetic effort perhaps by the residents, or perhaps the street cleaners had been around.

Mystery Surrounds Retention of Great Name by Dingy Lane.

Washington street appears to have been put to one good use. It is a parking place. Both sides of the street are lined with cars. Halfway down the thoroughfare there is a furniture warehouse. On the other side is the rear of a power house. A couple of alleys, called courts, cut a pathway between the dilapidated buildings. Stuck in the window of an upper floor was a sign advertising the fact that oyster suppers could be purchased there.

A dirty little white dog crossed Washington street, and two colored boys stood gaping at The Post cameraman. A strange tranquillity pervaded the scene. It seemed disconnected from the city beyond the crumbling shacks, beyond the proud steeple of the church at the corner. Just a block away is Judiciary Square.

Life is made up of contrasts, and the ugly and beautiful must exist side by side. Even the Nation's Capital, apparently, must have a street like this. But why it must bear the name of Washington, particularly at this time, is an enigma. Records at the District surveyor's office show that when the City of Washington was laid out a strip of 55 feet was set off, and that it was "unofficially" named Washington. But why it should continue to keep the name of Washington is a puzzle.

CONTRACTORS SEND PLASTERERS' UNION WAGES ULTIMATUM

Plan Cutting Scale From $14 to $10 on April 15, They Say.

OUTSIDE COMPETITION IS BLAMED FOR CRISIS

Employes Invited to Offer Alternative Proposal to Help Trade.

An ultimatum was sent to all local unions connected with the plastering trade recently by the Contracting Plasterers Association of Washington, proposing to put into effect on April 15 a new wage scale reducing the eight-hour day wage from $14 to $10, and a corresponding reduction in the pay of allied trades, unless a better solution to the contractors' problems would be offered.

The letter addressed to Operative Plasterers Cement Finishers International Association, Local No 96, located at 1024 New Jersey avenue, northwest, read, according to the Contractors Association, as follows:

"Necessity demands that action on your part and on our part be taken to obtain work.

Competition From Outside.

"At the present time we are unable to meet competition from outside contractors who bring nonunion help from other States at a price under our wage scale. The banks, the owners and people putting up the money are not willing to invest it because other large cities throughout the country are reducing wages and believing that a reduction is coming in Washington. They will not build at the present scale because a later wage reduction would decrease the value of the buildings erected under present wages.

"Contractors employing nonunion men and union men working at a reduced wage are consistently underbidding us. Your men are out of work, some are working nonunion and many are evading the rules of the union by rebate and otherwise.

"These conditions make it impossible for us to obtain contracts, thereby giving work to your men, and the conditions generally are certainly harmful to your organization in every way. It is therefore the sensible thing for your organization and the undersigned to immediately arrive at some agreement which will permit us to financially exist.

Union Proves Secretive.

"Therefore, unless before the first of March, 1932, you can offer some better solution to this matter, we propose to put into effect on April 15 the following wage scale, $1.25 per hour."

This letter was signed, with the name of the contracting association and contained the names of prominent contractors issuing the letter. Copies of the letter were sent to the offices of plastering unions throughout the country, the contracting association asserted.

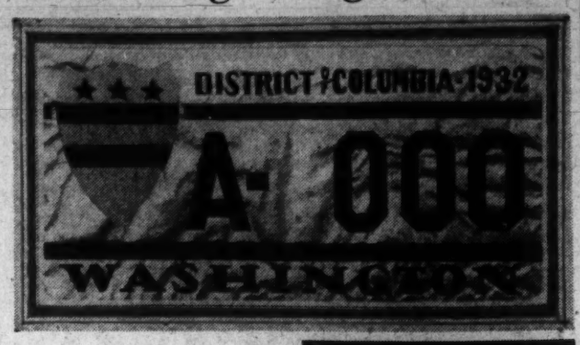
The local union held a closed meeting last night at its headquarters, and when Herbert Nelson, president of the organization, was asked whether they had taken any action on the letter, he said that the plasterers' association had not received the communication and disclaimed any knowledge of the organization undersigned on the letter.

Policeman Exonerated In Automobile Death

A coroner's jury yesterday absolved Private Joseph Coughlin, 58, Eleventh Precinct policeman, of blame in the death of John D. Connelly, 45, of 715 F street southwest. Connelly was struck by Coughlin's machine on the Bladensburg road near the District line Wednesday and died several hours later at Casualty Hospital.

Witnesses testified that Coughlin, who drives the Eleventh Precinct patrol and lives in Hyattsville, Md., could not avoid striking Connelly, who stepped in the path of the machine.

G. W. U. Art Student Wins Auto Tag Design Contest



His Suggestion May Be Used Permanently in Capital Licenses.

The automobile tag design which may be adopted for permanent use in the Capital was selected yesterday afternoon from 57 entries submitted to the Washington Board of Trade.

The design judged to be the best was the work of Alfred H. Minno, an art student at George Washington University. A design submitted by Robert Miller, also a George Washington University student, was singled out for honorable mention.

The winning design was selected for its effectiveness and originality of conception. The L'Enfant shield, intended as a crest for the City of Washington, is a feature of the drawing. The colors are silver and maroon.

Arthur B. Heaton, Washington architect, who proposed the contest, explained that the colors did not enter into the judging as they will probably be changed to tones assuring better visibility. Mr. Minno's design will be submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts for comment.

The judges were Alexander Trowbridge, Washington architect; Clifford K. Berryman, cartoonist; William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, and M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic.

GIRL SHOT HOLDUPS WITH PISTOL OF ONE, FOILED PAIR ASSERT

Prisoners Say She Fired Weapon in Hand of Man Threatening Her.

ONE VICTIM IN GRAVE CONDITION IN HOSPITAL

Police Seek Markswoman Who Showed Nerve in Robbery Attempt.

The mysterious woman marksman whose accurate shooting routed three holdup men on Conduit road Wednesday night is being sought by Montgomery County police. Her testimony and that of her male companion are wanted by the police in the prosecution of the youths who have confessed their part in the attempted holdup.

Police made it clear that they have no charges against the woman or her male companion as they are considered to have been within their rights in protecting themselves against attack. In fact, police are amazed at the coolheadedness and marksmanship of the young woman, who, in true Western movie thriller style, shot the gun out of the hand of one of the robbers and saved herself and companion from robbery and possible injury.

Two of the holdup men are being held for investigation in the Rockville Jail. The third is in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital from gunshot wounds in the stomach. He is under guard of Washington police.

Names of Prisoners.

The two held in Rockville are Stanley Upton Selby, 20 years old, of 1334 E street southeast, and James Melvin Brown, 18, of 463 G street northwest, who was shot in the hand by the mysterious woman. The youth in Emergency Hospital is Charles Crist, 25, 334 F street northwest. His condition was reported improved last night although still grave. Police plan to question him this morning if his condition permits.

According to confessions signed by the two youths they met Crist at the home of Brown about 6 o'clock in the evening and planned to go to Potomac to see a girl. Crist met the other two at Ninth and H streets northwest shortly afterward with a one-seated automobile, which, it later developed, was stolen from Nick A. Gaston, 109 Ninth street northwest.

Shooting Described.

The three drove to Cabin John where they stopped at the home of a girl friend, who was not at home, and then proceeded up the Conduit road toward Great Falls until they saw a large black car bearing Virginia tags parked on the side of the road. They stopped 200 feet away, the confessions said, and decided to hold up the car, as they had been planning such a deed for three days. Selby went to the left side of car and knocked on the window while the other two approached from the right side. A man and woman in the car were ordered to alight. When they reached the ground, the woman walked in back as though frightened. Brown had just told the man that this was "no joke" when the woman began shooting. Her first shot knocked the .25 automatic he was carrying from Brown's hand and her next shot struck Crist in the stomach. A third shot was unaccounted for.

The youths hurriedly returned to their car and made a hasty retreat. They started toward Rockville on the road from Potomac and when they were about two miles from Rockville something went wrong with their car. They believed themselves to be out of gas, they told police, and hailed a passing car bound for Potomac. They told the driver they had been held up and that one of their group was seriously wounded and he returned them to Rockville.

Story Causes Investigation.

They told the same story to police at headquarters in Rockville, but were detained by Policeman G. W. Linthicum, when they tried to leave. In the meantime, the Rockville Rescue Squad was sent to the scene and found young Crist on the ground near the road. After giving him first aid, they took him to Emergency Hospital.

Corporal Harry Merson, Policeman Paul Watkins and Policeman Linthicum called Sergeant Roy Bodmer, in charge of the precinct and they made a survey of the scene. They decided the tale told by the youths sounded untrue. The two youths were held until yesterday, when both confessed to Chief of Police Alvie A. Moxley. The physical facts at the scene and the finding of their pistol as they had foretold led police to believe the facts set forth in the confessions.

STREET CAR MERGER REPORT LIKELY SOON

Black Forecasts Unamended Measure; Would Leave Details to P. U. C.

An early report on the traction merger bill, in nearly original form, unrestricted by limiting amendments, was predicted last night by Chairman Loring M. Black, jr., chairman of the utilities subcommittee of the House District committee.

Mr. Black's statement followed final hearings yesterday at which heads of the two street railway companies declared they would accept no merger agreement that would leave the consolidated concern less well off than the two companies now are.

President John H. Hanna, of the Capital Traction Co., and President William F. Ham, of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., will make similar statements at final hearings of the Senate District committee at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Representative Black's statement that he favored reporting the bill favorably, with few, if any amendments, was backed up by Representative Frank L. Bowman, Republican, a member of the committee.

"It seems to me such matters as reduced fares for school children and universal transfers, should be left to the Public Utilities Commission," he said. "We might as well abolish the Public Utilities Commssion if we are not going to make any use of it."

Messrs. Ham and Hanna yesterday made a blanket objection to amendments sponsored largely by People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, William McK. Clayton, of the Federation of Citizens's Associations, and Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Citizens Association.

They declared the amendments would hamper the new company in its operations and restrict the authority of the Public Utilities Commission.

"What the public will get out of this is not to be measured by immediate results, but by the ultimate developments of a transportation system," Mr. Ham told the committee. "If that is true, the new company should be made as profitable as possible."

Mr. Hanna took issue especially with amendments designed to limit activities of the company to street cars and motor buses. He said the company might decide to operate taxicabs.

Benefits that would result to the public from the merged company would include a $60,000 saving annually from free transfers, as well as extensions and improvements that might be possible under the consolidated system, he testified.

Tate Will Face Quiz On Gas Rate Schedule

The Public Utilities Commission hearing on proposed rate reductions of the Washington Gas Light Co. will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning in the District Building. There will be considerable questioning of Thomas R. Tate, valuation engineer for the commission, regarding the alternative rate schedules submitted Wednesday by William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, indicated at the close of the first day's session that he would have something to propose today also.

AUTO SNIPER FIRES SHOT AT STREET CAR

Motorman Reports Attack; Jury Declares Riedel Slayer Unknown.

The sniper scare continued last night as Clifford Davidson, of 2217 North Capitol street, motorman of a street car westbound on Thirty-first street, said he saw a Ford coupe, with a dark paint finish, pass the car at P street and the occupant fire a shot at the base of the car.

Guy Lucas, 1628 Gales street northwest, the conductor of the car, said that he heard a noise resembling that of a stone striking the car, but did not see the passing coupe. The two passengers on the car told police investigators that they had not heard or seen anything at the time.

A coroner's jury yesterday decided that Paul Riedel, 45-year-old baker, was slain as "the result of gunshot wounds inflicted by a person unknown." The inquest was held two weeks after the slaying of Riedel, with a view to giving police time to apprehend the murderer.

Among those who testified were Harry Altemus and Miss Yvonne Barnett, who were sitting in an automobile near Riedel's shop on the night of the killing and saw the man believed to be responsible also for the shooting of several other persons, emerge from the bakery. Several policemen who went to the scene of the shooting also took the stand.

Another attempted shooting tentatively laid to the sniper—the firing of several shots at J. Edward Rossier, Navy Department clerk, Wednesday night, is still being investigated by police. Rossiter was standing in front of his home at 3005 Tenth street northeast, when the shots were fired from a light roadster.

Robert Stratham, 24, arrested Tuesday night as a suspect in the recent shootings, was still in police custody last night, while his actions over the last few weeks were investigated. A number of witnesses of the shootings failed to identify him.

Millionth Person to Face Police Court Goes to Jail

Officers of the Police Court yesterday reported an unusual record when they said that the 1,000,000th person to face trial in the Police Court of the District, had been sentenced to 25 days in jail on a charge of intoxication.

Police Court, as its records now disclose, was established 62 years ago. Most of the million cases it has handled in recent years have been traffic violations or minor prohibition offenses.

William Brown, who probably doesn't know, nor care, that he was the millionth person to be tried, was arrested at the Washington Circle when he proved unable to navigate the treacherous corners of that particular piece of real estate. Judge Gus A. Schuldt sentenced him.

ASSAULT ON 2 MEN LAID TO POLICEMAN

John J. Hunter, of Third Precinct, Is Held Under Bond of $500.

Policeman John J. Hunter, of the Third Precinct, was released on a $500 bond yesterday when he was arraigned in Police Court on a charge of assault. The warrant for his arrest was filled out while Hunter was in attendance at court and the paper was served before he left the building.

Hunter, a veteran policeman, is accused of having assaulted two men who called for a dress the wife of one of them was having made at 1212 Virginia avenue southwest.

The men, Clyde H. Nichols, 437½ Tenth street southwest, and George E. Brown, of the same address, appeared at the place and were denied admittance. The men knocked again at the door, and this time, Nichols said, Hunter came out and knocked Brown down. In stepping between the two, Nichols claimed, he received a blow on his jaw from Hunter's blackjack, and he suffered a fracture of the jaw.

Hunter denied that he had struck the men, Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keogh, who prosecuted the case, said.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION OPENED

Nearly 1,000 Young People Attend; Brookhart and Ferrin Are Heard.

Almost 1,000 young people, representing societies of Washington and nearby churches, last night opened the anhual District Christian Endeavor convention at the National City Christian Church. Their first speaker was Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, who brought welcome from Congress and a few pleasantries on prohibition.

He spoke briefly and his comment stressed the good effects of the eighteenth amendment in this city.

William C. Bond, president of the District Christian Endeavor Union, presided. After a song service, Dr. E. C. Barnes leading, with Chester Williams at the organ, Dr. E. Wilfley, pastor emeritus of the National City Church, delivered the invocation.

The pastor of the church, Dr. H. H. Harmon, welcomed the delegates in a brief address. Justine Lawrie, choir leader of Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, was heard in musical selections.

Howard W. Ferrin, New England radio preacher and president of the Providence Bible Institue, brought the message of the evening. He urged the young people to take Christ into their hearts, to consecrate their lives to him, in an eloquent sermon.

The convention will continue today and tomorrow, with mass meetings at 7:30 o'clock in the evenings. Before the meeting there will be class periods under Mr. Ferrin, Dr. James Miers, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church; Harvey Prentice, superintendent of the Gospel Mission; Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial Church, and others.

Butcher Is Fined $65 For Defrauding Trade

A fine of $65 was imposed yesterday on Ellis Levy, butcher, whose store is in the 1500 block of Seventh street northwest, after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of defrauding his customers by giving them light weight when he was arraigned before Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

The case was worked up by the office of George M. Roberts in the District Department of Weights and Measures. Mr. Roberts said the butcher's scales were hidden from the sight of his customers. Investigators sent to the place bought meats on two different days, a dozen purchases in all. The least amount of underweight was 3 ounces and the largest 2½ pounds, according to Mr. Roberts.

COLORED GROUP HITS SCHOOL BUDGET CUT

Associations Seek Hearing Before Congress Body to Offer Protests.

Disproportionate reductions in the appropriation for buildings and grounds for colored school children, in the 1933 budget, were the basis of an organized protest formulated last night at a meeting of delegates of colored civic and fraternal associations held in the auditorium of the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, under auspices of the local branch of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

The mass meeting decided to request a hearing before the subcommittee of Congress having in charge these appropriations, not only with reference to this matter, but also with reference to the "proposed transfer of 20 classes of children of tender years to the old Business High School, deemed unfit for senior high school students."

By request of the sponsoring organization, Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools in charge of divisions 10-13, recited the history of the equalization of appropriations between the white and colored populations of the District, on a per pupil basis, giving the present colored ratio as 33.9. He stated that, on previous occasions, deductions have been made on estimates, either by the Board of Education, or by the Commissioners, or Congress, but that present deductions had been made by the Budget Bureau.

He advocated no reduction of items for white schools, amounting to $1,365,000, but increased appropriations for colored school buildings to bring the $334,000 allotted to them from 19 per cent up to 34 per cent. Other speakers included Dr. R. W. Brooks, the Rev. J. D. Pair, E. F. G. Merritt, Woolsey W. Hall, W. H. Lewis, Col. West A. Hamilton, Mrs. M. A. McAdoo and A. V. Hillyer.

Woman, 100 Years Old, Overcome by Coal Gas

A woman, who is about 100 years of age according to her neighbors, was found overcome by coal gas last night at her home, 846 K street northeast. She was taken to Casualty Hospital in an undetermined condition.

The woman, Catherine Wood, colored, was found by an aged friend who was unable to give her name to police. Her screams attracted Lawrence Berth, of 1001 K street northeast, who called police and an ambulance.

Theft Victim Is Near Death From Hunger

A man who had apparently been robbed of his last $3.50 about a week ago, was found unconscious early yesterday morning in the hallway of an apartment house at 800 North Capitol street. Physicians at Gallinger Hospital, where he was taken, said that he was starving. His condition is critical.

The man, Ollie C. Rowe, 27 years old, who gave his address as 223 Pennsylvania avenue northwest when he reported his robbery, was found by Private G. A. Williams, of the First Precinct. The policeman called the Casualty Hospital ambulance and the man was t... to the hospital. His mother, Mrs. Mary Rowe, lives at Columbia, S. C.

Rowe appeared at a police station on February 11 to report that a colored man had struck him in the face with a blunt instrument in front of of 465 Missouri avenue northwest and had taken $3.50 from his pockets. Later James Reed, colored, 28 years old, was arrested and police said Rowe identified him as the man who struck him. Rowe failed to appear in court to prosecute, however, and the case was thrown out for lack of evidence.

Modern Paganism Scored By Catholic U. Lecturer

Scoring certain Americans as being "more pagan than the pagans themselves," the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, professor of philosophy at the Catholic University, stated that "under the name of enlightenment they have shut out the light of revelation and are lost in the stygian blackness of pagan ignorance; under the name of progress they have slipped back intellectually and morally almost 2,500 years.

In the second of a series of Lenten sermons at Sacred Heart Church he cited only 38,000,000 of the non-Catholics in the United States being affiliated with any church, and the increasing interest among Americans in the mysterious cults of the Orient.

"I must point out to you some of the consequences of American paganism on the life of our Nation. But who can read of the deliberateness with which an American husband and wife decide the existence or nonexistence of their child without being forced to recall the grewsome custom of pagan Rome, where the new-born child was placed at the feet of the father? If he picked it up it was to live; if he turned away it was put to death. Who can view the execrable increase of divorce and the saturnalia of Reno and other divorce mills without thinking at the same time of the loosest days of pagan Rome, when women reckoned their age by the number of their husbands? Who can read of the orgies of hard-drinking American people without recalling the pagan bacchanalian excesses of the days of the Roman dissolution? Who can stand in study of the greatest American business, education, without repicturing the customs of ancient and pagan Sparta, where education was conducted without respect for the rights of God, the rights of the child or the obligations of parents? Who can witness the ruthlessness of American business and its disregard of both justice, honesty and charity without seeing before his mind the vision of the pagan pirates of the Mediterranean?
